VERONICA.

BY SYLVIA HUNTING.

As along the dusty way Jesus told that awful day, While dark streams of sweat and blood Through His matted locks overflowed, 'Twas a cruel sight she saw, Tender, true Veronica!

As, with gentler touch, she said, Lifting the poor bleeding Head, 'Master, let this hand of mine Wipe the Face of the Divine! 'Twas a woful sight she saw, Faithful, kind Veronica!

But an instant might He stand Till into her trembling hand Back the linen cloth He gave— Faithful to the very grave,— Then a wondrous sight she saw, Steadfast, brave Veronica!

All the life-blood left her heart; Lined as if by painter's art Traced upon the napekin fair, Jesus' Face before her there! While she sank, in wordless awe, Sobbing low, Veronica!

Oh, beside the dusty way To have watched with her that day! To have waited till He came, In His sorrow and His shame; To have shared in what she saw, Blessed, thrice blessed Veronica!

A Victim to the Seal of Confession.

A True Story, by Rev. Joseph Spillman, S. J.

Presently I turned to the newspaper again, in order to read the end of the matter. There were endless articles about the trial, and a great deal that was uncomplimentary was said of you, Sir, as the counsel for the defence, and the failure of your attempt to exculpate your client by suggesting that he was probably pledged to secrecy by the obligations of the confessional, as had been recently the case with all priests in Poland. And after all you were correct in your surmise: Other articles followed, making me the ends of the anti-clerical party, casting contempt on the Church and her ministers. Finally in turning over the pages these words in large type caught my eye:

The Sie, Victoire tragedy. Parson of the murderer. For a moment I breathed freely; but alas on looking further I saw that the parson meant that the sentence of death was commuted to transportation for life. A description followed of the conduct of the prisoner, who had to exchange his priestly cassock for a convict's jacket, and of his embarkation on board the Durance for his life-long exile. I read it through to the end. By the time I had finished day was breaking, and I heard the cocks crowing in the grey dawn. I resolved to act promptly. I selected the newspapers which gave an account of the trial and the parson, and folding them up carefully, I put them in an envelope and slipped them into the breast pocket of my coat. Then I took two thousand gold pieces out of my cash-box, called the manager, as soon as I heard him stir, gave him my orders, and without losing a moment mounted my horse and rode over to the Sie's house in Valparaiso. I asked for the parson, and to him I acknowledged my crime, begging him to assist me in expiating it. He entered into my feelings most kindly and compassionately; he helped me to examine my conscience and prepared me to make a general confession of my past life. This took a long time, and it brought ease to my conscience, and the hope of forgiveness; and this hope in the mercy of God encouraged me to persevere in my determination to do all within my power to make amends for my dreadful crime. The price of course made me promise to spare no effort to get the unjust sentence reversed, and the innocent prisoner liberated and his name cleared; to restore the stolen money, and make compensation as far as possible to the relatives of the priest for all they had suffered. Above all the priest insisted that had been given must be removed. Not until I made a full deposition in writing concerning the murder of Sie, Victoire, and signed it in the presence of a notary, did he give me absolution. I made it in the House of the Fathers; I made my will, disposing of my properly in case of my death, and started on my way home, choosing the overland route as the quickest and safest. I reached Buenos Ayres just in time to catch the steamer which was leaving for Bordeaux. Yesterday we landed and I came straight here by train; my first inquiry was for your residence, Sir, as I had seen your name as the counsel for the unhappy priest. So here I am, ready to make amends and atonement to the utmost of my power.

Mr. Meunier had listened with rapid attention to this lengthy narrative. At its close, he pressed Loser's hand and said: "In spite of your past errors, I cannot help respecting you for what you have done, I regard you now as my client, and I assure you your confession will be safe with me. You did well to come to me first of all. We will certainly have all amends made as far as possible, but more need not be done than is necessary. You shake your head? Just hear me out. It will be quite easy to make restitution of the stolen money and compensate the Montmoulin family for the pecuniary loss they have sustained, you have only to write a cheque on the Valparaiso bank and leave it in my hands. A reversal of the sentence can also be obtained, by means of which Father Montmoulin will regain his liberty, and be acquitted of all stain on his character, without your appearing in court in person. You simply have to sign a confession of your crime, which I will draw up. As a precaution I will have your signature attested by two witnesses, but they need know nothing of the contents of the document to which you append your name. As soon as that is done you can return to Chili by the next steamer, sell your estate and go to North America or to Australia under an assumed name. I will see that you have time to get clear off, out of the reach of the law before your deposition is laid before the authorities. The case will then be tried again, and the second hearing is certain to result in Father Montmoulin's acquittal.

Loser smiled again, as he answered: "My confessor in Valparaiso said just like me. He expressly told me that I was by no means bound to give myself up to justice at the risk of being sentenced to death. It would be quite enough if I consented that my declaration, witnessed by the notary, were sent in to the judge. Father Montmoulin acted most generously toward me, though he was only fulfilling the obligations of his office. And then I thought the blood of the poor defenceless old lady, which I shed in such a brutal way, called for a more complete expiation of my crime. Besides, would not my personal evidence, given in public, do far more to obtain the acquittal of the prisoner who was so unjustly condemned, and by making a greater impression, contribute more to reinstate him in public opinion than any written confession could do? I said all this to my confessor, and he agreed with me. Therefore I begged him to keep my deposition, and in case I should repent of my resolution, or any accident should happen to me, after a fixed time to forward it to Aix. Then I set out on my journey hither. "Have you ever since that time repented of your resolution?" the solicitor inquired. "I cannot deny that I have wavered several times. But reading the trial over again always confirmed me in the determination I had taken." "There is very little doubt that the verdict against you will be full of murder, and you will be sentenced to death." "I expect nothing else." "The most favorable sentence we could look for would condemn you to the hard lot of a convict— penal servitude for life." "Through my sin Father Montmoulin has had to endure that lot for nearly three years; it is high time that I get his chains taken off, so we will if you please, not delay a single day longer."

"This is then, your free, deliberate determination?" "I had time enough and to spare, to think it all over on the voyage. I beg you not to put my constancy to a fresh and painful trial, nor to postpone Father Montmoulin's release for one hour longer than can be helped."

"You are right. So let it be. May God give you strength to bear this weight of expiation which you have voluntarily taken upon yourself."

Mr. Meunier himself accompanied the repentant to the police station, where he gave himself up to the astonished Commissioner of Police who was on duty at the time. By a curious coincidence, this man happened to be one of the police agents who had gone with the examining magistrate to institute the inquiry at Sie, Victoire, and who had apprehended Father Montmoulin.

"Mr. Superintendent," Meunier said to him, "I am sure that you will treat this gentleman, who has come all the way from South America to deliver himself up to justice, with the utmost leniency that the law allows."

"Let me have the same treatment that the innocent priest had," Loser said, in a voice of quiet resignation. Meunier took a friendly leave of him, and hastened away to the residence of the president. Mr. Justice Peultier, "It is Wednesday," he said to himself, "so I shall find the prosecutor Joubert and some other Justices there. I know they meet on this evening every week for a game of cards. There is ten striking! I hope I shall not be too late."

He got there precisely at the right moment. The cards had been thrown down and the friends were about to disperse, when Meunier was announced. The gentlemen, who had risen to depart, looked at each other and at him with questioning surprise. The newcomer apologized at so unsuitable an hour; he did so, he said, because he had something of great importance to communicate to them. The other gentlemen would perhaps kindly remain and hear what a singular thing had occurred. He then repeated the story he had just heard from Loser's lips. The lawyers listened with profound and growing interest, as was shown by the attention they paid to the narrator, and the questions which now and again one or other of them addressed to him.

The Public prosecutor remembered how ruthlessly he had pilloried the unfortunate criminal, and regretted his sharp speeches. "You are quite convinced of the man's sanity?" he inquired, when Meunier had ended his narrative. "As sure as I have ever been of any man's," was the reply. "Heaven be thanked," exclaimed myself to get a pardon for Montmoulin. We can now hope to be able to do something for him. That is to say, if the poor fellow has not succumbed to the horrid climate, and the fearful hardships of a convict's life in the penal settlements."

Eczema Tortured A Child.

I only took two bottles, when my hands got completely cured. —Emma Sheridan, Parry Sound, Ont.

mediately upon his arrival, and the wrong which unfortunately has been done him may as far as possible be set right. The fatal thing was that at the first judicial inquiry circumstances all seemed to point to him as the perpetrator of the crime so that despite the able defence of our talented colleague here, there was from the outset little hope of an acquittal. "If the unhappy priest had either when before the examining magistrate or in Court, giving the least hint that the sacrilegious had been with him after the crime was committed!" exclaimed the Public Prosecutor.

March and the Lion.

THE SAYING about the lion and the lamb in March often proves false, but there is another and a better one which is literally true. When March comes in and finds you taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify, enrich and vitalize your blood, you may expect, when it goes out, that it will leave you free from that tired feeling, and with none of the boils, pimples and eruptions which manifest themselves because of impure blood in the spring. If you have not already begun taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for your spring medicine, we advise you to begin to-day. We assure you it will make you feel better all through the coming summer.

A TWICE TOLD TALE!

A St. Thomas Lady in May, '97, Told How Doan's Kidney Pills Cured Her of Backache and Made Her Strong and Healthy.

In a recent letter she tells how she has enjoyed two and a half years of splendid health—free from pain or suffering.

There are very few remedies now on the market that will stand the test of time. All they do to give a little temporary relief. They never go to the seat of the trouble and root it out of the system. Not so with Doan's Kidney Pills. Their action on the Kidneys is of a permanent curative character, altogether unlike any of the substitute or cheap imitations.

One strong proof of this is the two statements made by Mrs. E. W. Trapp, of St. Thomas, Ont.

The first of these, made May 10th, 1897, is as follows: "When I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills I was sick and miserable with severe pains in my back and kidneys. I was also very weak and nervous. Since using these pills the pains have been removed, my nerves have been strengthened and good health has been restored to me. They are a splendid medicine for kidney troubles of any kind."

The second statement which we give below is of recent date, and shows what splendid health Mrs. Trapp has had since Doan's Kidney Pills cured her two and a half years ago. "Over two years ago I wrote telling of the cure made in my case by Doan's Kidney Pills. At the present time I am enjoying the very best of health; sleep well, eat well, and my old enemies, backache and kidney trouble have never returned. Instead of misery and a broken down constitution, I have for the past two years enjoyed a fresh sense of the value and beauty of life."
