"You don't mean to say that baby will go to sleep in all this racket?" demanded in amazement.

"Why, certainly," answered the litthe mother serenely, "he will sleep in three minutes-the precious." "How can he?"

"Why, just because he always has. He couldn't, of course, if he were trained to expect absolute quiet, but he hasn't been, so he can go to sleep under pretty nearly any conditions, and I hope he always will be able to.' Which of these two mothers do you think was the kindest and wisest? Of course, I scarcely need to tell ou what I think.

I don't call that matter for pride. call it weak-minded slavery to circumstance. I think that man ought to have his desk moved into another room and break those chains, and make his power to work independent of conditions.

Do you remember-in the Hoosier Schoolboy, I think it was-the story of the boy who could not write unless he twisted a certain button on his coat, and how some of his enemies the swains, big brother started a managed to cut this button off just before the examination day and the triumphant announcement "Three boy failed utterly because he missed the button?

> That sounds rather absurd, doesn't it? And yet a lot of us have fetish buttons of one sort or another upon whose presence we let our comfor and facility depend.

That first baby, for instance, when he grows up will have the fetish of an inability to go to sleep unless there is absolute quiet.

Isn't it better when we find we have gotten into such ways, to cut off the button ourselves, and learn to recite without it, rather than to risk being utterly upset if it is unexpectedly cut

California's Greatest Oil Well.

It was the persistency of a single man that discovered the greatest oil well in California and what is per haps the richest well in the history of the oil industry. A discouraged board of directors, three days before the oil gusher was struck, decided to quit drilling. The order was given, but the superintendent conveniently forgot it. He drilled forty-seven feet more against penalty of dismissal, and then the bit entered the oil sands. The gusher started to spout on the morning of March 15, and, save for a period of eight hours in which it 'sanded up" on March 21, after which t burst forth of its own accord like volcano of oil, the well flowed continuously. Up to May 3 it had deivered about 2,000,000 barrels of oil. The stream now rises intermittenty from 170 to 240 feet above the tor of the derrick which before the grown or top was carried off by the stream of oil, was eighty-four feet in neight. The oil sands were struck at 2,300 feet, at which point a tremendous gas pressure was encountered, and the drillers were suddenly nundreds of feet in the air through the eight inch casing. After the oil sands were struck the well rapidly 'drilled itself" to a greater depth.

The well can be heard roaring for more than a mile. Spray from the zusher has been carried a distance of two and a half miles, and hundreds of automobiles have carried sightseers from Bakersfield to witness the unique sight. The sagebrush for a distance of half a mile around the well is coated with oil and several jack rabbits killed by the flow were brought by boys into Maricop.

Meets Death in Diving Armour

Provincetown, Mass., Aug 3-Thirty fathoms deep in the waters of Cape Cod Bay in search of a sunken tor pedo, George William Fairey, a gunner's mate on the flagship Connecticut, of the Atlantic fleet, and a resident of Orangeburg, S.C., lost his life yesterday, according to word brought ashore from the fleet to-day.

The Connecticut was engaged in target practice with torpedoes when one of the missiles sank to the bot tom of the bay. Fairey was sent ou with a boat's crew and diving apparatus to recover it, and on his way to the bottom of the bay he signalled "O.K." There was a pause for a mo ment when he reached bottom and then came a faint signal of danger His comrades pulled the diver as quickly as possible to the surface and hastily opening the armour found

The cause of the fatality is not known, but it is presumed that there must have been trouble in the trans mitting of air. The body was shipped to-day to Fairey's sister, Mrs. E. I Pauling, of Orangeburg, S.C.
