London to Have a Fayre.

London is to have an Olde English Fayre. The ladies connected with the Protestant Orphans' Home first mooted the subject, and at a special meeting of the board of that institution in Victoria Hall this morning primary arrangements were made. June 5 was fixed as the day on which the festival will be inaugurated. The ladies are determined if possible to rival in every respect the fayre held in Hamilton a short time since, and for that purpose have placed the matter of details Hamilton a short time since, and for that purpose have placed the matter of details in the hands of the following competent committee of management: Mrs. Smallman, Mrs. Wm. "It is out of sight at present," was the reply.
"What is the village's view of the situation?" inquired the scribe.
"Well, we think the city has done us a pretty mean turn after passing the bylaw to revoke it and try to ring in the changes to our disadvantage. The bill not only required us to come in at an increased rate on our taxation, provided the city passed the new bylaw, but in it the city did not even guarantee to keep the breakwater in even guarantee to keep the breakwater in repair."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"What are you going to do about it?" asked the reporter.

"Well, that remains to be seen. It may be that the suit against the city to recover the cost of building and maintaining the breakwater on account for the dam will be revived, and if so I think we'll get the best of it. And then there is the sewerage question, too. The courts are on our side, and if we wish to push the matter we can put the city to the enormous expense of a new sewage system. I don't say that this will be done, but it shows that it is to the city's advantage to treat us fairly, which they have not done."

A Member of the London Gun Club Corrects a Misstatement—No Trout "Planted" at Their Pond.

To the Editor of the Advertiser:

The secretary of the London Gun Club, Mr. Fred T. Trebilocok, has returned from an eastern trip, and he takes exception to a paragraph in your issue of April 26 reflecting on the London Gun Club. He says you have been entirely misled in referring to the million of trout planted in our pond by a young lawyer, making holes with his finger in the ground and putting the small fish in tail upwards, assisted by a wholesale and a retail merchant. I have found out the names of the parties referred to, and only one of the gentlemen has stock in our club. The trout fry in question was sent out for our opposition club, which represents a pond ten yards square, while the London Gun Club's lake at Dorchester covers 66 acres, and is three-fourths of a mile long, being one of the finest ponds suitable for trout in Canada, having about three miles of stream in connection with the pond.

"The London Gun Club is an incorporated joint stock company with about 40 stockholders composed of prominent business men, some in Montreal, Toronto, Woodstock, Petrolea and many in London, and as we have spent a lot of money in cleaning our pond and have contracted for a large number of trout fry, we don't want you paper nor any other to give our stockholders an idea that we are throwing away the moneys of the club by planting trout or dumping them in our pond, to be eaten up by the larger trout. While we have lawyers, doctors and business men of all kin is in our club, you must not think for one moment that it is not run under a true system, and they strongly object to the insinuation that we are so ignorant of what we are doing as to plant trout and expect to grow a crop. At the same time we are not doubting the truth of your article, but if your readers will inquire into the names of the gentlemen who planted the fish they will find they have nothing to do with the management of our club. We trust you will retract wha have said and give credit where credit due. Yours, London Gun Club.
