On such flapdoodle as this the Canadian public have been fed long enough, daily and weekly, by socalled able and influential journals. In view of the facts of current history, we suggest that the too copious supply of the stuff they feed fools on be stopped, and minated, and failed. The alleged "business men's boom" in favor of Arthur was got up by New York importers and agents the promoters of the Row in a friendly of European financial houses; and was in reality a free trade movement, very little disguised. With its promoters it was anything to beat Blaine, but they got badly beaten themselves. The Times and the Evening Post are New York journals of great circulation and influence and ably conducted. On political issues, properly so called, as distinguished from issues that are more of a commercial or industrial character, the Times speaks for a large and influential ir., whose travels in Burmah and Siam section of the republican party. were thrown from a buggy, says: "Neither of them was seriously hurt, though for the time they looked nolle prosequi." Shades of Jumbo's pa! let us adjourn sine die. It has been known from the beginning that Blaine would take his stand before the country as an ultra-protectionist, in favor not merely of maintaining the tariff as it is, but further of putting it back to where it was before it was interfered with by an accidental democratic majority in 1883. On the question of protection the platform adopted this year by the republican party is actually more decided and emphatic than ever before. The assertion is boldly made that protection is wanted for its own sake, and all "incidental" nonsense is thrown to the winds. The defeat of the republican free traders in their own party councils is overwhelming, and probably decisive. Their particular hobby has been conspicuously kicked out : and they seem to realize the fact, as some of their organs are threatening to "bolt," and to work against the party candidate rather than for him. ather than for him. In the face of all this, what nonsense for trade in other places. If, for instance, the trade in other places in Ontario has dimin-ished, say 20 per cent. and the trade in Oakville has diminished in the same probe impossible to do this, but it is better to fall short of a high ideal than to reach a low one. Canadians should take hold of the sug portion, then common sense and justice must lead us to assign that falling off to the same source. But, in addition to the depression of business caused by hard times and which Oakville must suffer in common gestion to call an independence meeting, and feel the public pulse. Do not wait to hear whether Edward Blake is going to take in-dependence for a plank in his political platform, or what John A. Macdonald will with all other places, the people of this town labor under a disadvantage this year have to say about it. If the independence of Canada is to be achieved it ought not to that is peculiar to themselves. The im-mediate vicinity of Oakville is pre-eminof Canada is to be achieved it ought not to become the cry of one party as against the other, but the united movement of the whole Canadian nation. The parks committee and the university authorities ought to meet the promoters of the Row in a friendly spirit. The V. P. Journal (Victoria university, Cobourg) has closed its first year. It is a unique but creditable outcome of college journalism. In July it will enter on the second volume and appear thereafter every month. It is full of the national idea, and month. It is full of the national idea, and therefore friendly to the idea of a national or at least provincial university. In the July Manhattan, Frank Vincent, it, whose travels in Burmah and Siam

And we further find that the merchants of And we further find that the merchants of Oakville are doing as large a business rela-tively, and are as prosperons as are those of other places, perhaps even more prosperons. Again, then, we assert that there is not the slightest proof that our trade has suffered because of the act. We venture to go because of the act. We venture to go further and confidently assert that the business of Oakville is really more pros-perous because of the Scott act than it would be without it. Having assigned the depression of trade here to its natural and adequate causes, we will now briefly consider another state-ment made, or rather the reason for de-pression civen by the suit. The statement is, that some of the farmers are going to other places to trade. There exp he no doubt Mr. Woodwork is putting a new roof on his house, which adds much to the appear-ance of the building. that some of the farmers are going to other places to trade. There can be no doubt, and no one denies, that there are a few f farmers who formerly did their business at Oakville and who now go to other places to trade, some because of the Scott act, some for various other reasons. But all
