The Industrial Schools.
It surprised many that the schools' grants passed, as there seemed to be considerable opposition to them among the larger property-owners.
As for the Howard memorial that seemed doomed from the start. The City Solicitor was asked if the university could legally sell the $2000 annuity. At first glance he thought it possible, but refused to deliver a finat opiniop on the matter.
May or Clarke did not look particularly pleased when The Worki asked him his opinion of yesterday's vote. "I was pleased when The World asked him his opinion of yesterday's vote. "I was sorry to see that the ratepayers have taken the view they did. Permanent improvements should in my opinion be paid not alone by the present generation, but those who will benefit by them in the days to come. The World's editorial of this morning, to my mind at least, was a clear exposition of the situa-tion."
