 Mayor.

RUSSIAN HOUSEKEEPING.

An Enchanting and Luxurious Exterior is Often a White Sepulchre. The first thing that strikes the eye of the stranger who enters a Russian house is the cleanliness and the order of the interior. The housekeeping is a science, and the Russian housewife is a master of her art. The cleanliness of the interior is a result of the cleanliness of the exterior. The first dinner we went to was the most beautiful thing I ever saw. Such flowers, such gold and silver, such a beautiful service! The table was a great square of oak, black as ink, and as polished as a mirror. The table was a great square of oak, black as ink, and as polished as a mirror. RUSSIAN HOUSEKEEPING.

An Exhausting and Luxurious Estate, Titled "Often a White Sepulchre, Hiding a Black Grave."

An American—the circumstances of whose life compel her to live in Russia—writes: "The housekeeping is a fearful waste of money and a fearful waste of the people. When I first came all my preconceived ideas seemed to be quite upset."

"At dinner we went to was the most beautiful thing I ever saw. Such flowers, such gold and silver plate, such silver and gold cut glass, such service! The table was a great square of oak, black as ink, and as polished as a billiard table. It was covered with its beauty under a cloth. 'It only covering was two strips of splendid old altar lace laid along each side of the table.' Up the middle of the table marched 12 candlesticks, two and two, and two and two, and two and two, and two and two, which has the milky green of shallow sea water, thickly powdered with gold dust. They were made in those fantastic dragon-shapes of which the Venice glass-workers are so fond, and the shades were of delicate gold, flagon, horn, and silver, and of pale and pale violet silk. There were 20 or 30 tiny

And vases set about the table
With flowers of the purple and blue Double violets—just careless little Purple, with long loose stems and a few leaves. At each plate stood a glass of sparkling water, and a gem of the Venetian factories, making a charming mass of translucent color, the forks and spoons and knives were works of art, with handles of gold, of carved ivory, or porcelain or of the finest silver.

"Everything one touched or handled to use in any way was a delight to the eye, and the food served was fairly made like shadows."

The women were the most beautiful, high-bred creatures I ever saw—such a grace and refinement, and a fluency with which they slipped from one topic to another without apparently knowing and caring for the facility—in English, German, French or Russian—fairly took away one's breath.
And these great grown and jewels! I have never seen such a group of women anywhere outside of America.
The men weren't quite so nice. They had heavy faces, and brushed their hair back with a stiff brush, in that odious Continental fashion, but they were quite as brilliant and accomplished as the women, and their conversation was of the last perfection of civilization, luxury and high breeding.

"We came away enchanted and saying to ourselves, 'How wonderful is this vinicinal mind to judge a whole nation without knowing anything about them?'"

At first, it was a mere curiosity, so graceful and luxurious, that we congratulated ourselves on being obliged to live in Italy.

His Galling.

Breslau, a celebrated singer, born at Canterbury, was of a proud, not without such bad success that they were almost starved. He repaired to the churchwardens and asked them to let him take possession of the parson for the week for hiring a room, etc. The charitable bait took. The benefit proved a bumper one, and the churchwardens were waited upon the wizard to touch the recitals.

"I have already disposed of them," said Breslau, "de promise were for de poor."
He kept my profits, and gave de money to my own people, who are de poorest in district.

"Sir!" exclaimed the churchwardens in a tone of surprise.
"I know it," replied the conjurer, "I live by this trick."—Tit-Bits.

Blackstone vs. the Justice.

A certain justice of the peace having arrested, previous to a trial, at the instance upon a question of law, highly satisfactory to himself, refused to enter an argument by the opposing counsel.

"If your honor please," the counsellor replied, "I should like to cite a few authorities upon the point."

"I have no objection," interrupted the justice, who stated:

"The court knows the law, and the counsel is not to be allowed to waste his given its opinion and that settles it."

"It was not," continued counsel, "with a view of convicting your honor that you are wrong, but I should like to show you what a fool Blackstone is."

the outside of life. Finally we grew very tired of living in a hotel and concluded we would rent a furnished house for the season. There was one which had taken my fancy greatly. It was occupied by people of the same background as myself, a well-to-do couple, a young man and a young woman. The owners were rich people, and they had furnished it in a semi-Oriental style, with a large garden and a swimming pool. The Russian influence has become paramount in Persia the best of the Persian people. They are all very fond of the Russian market, and the walls of this house were hung throughout the house. The most striking was a large, dark, and made the most charming picture when one went in out of the bitter cold and hung a cup of afternoon tea. The drawing room hung with these gorgeous mosaics of color, more low divans all around the room, more and more of the same pattern, and a large, gleaming on a pearl inlaid table, the lights making a soft, rich glow, and a faint smell of incense mingled with the perfume of the leopards and the hot-house flowers. So that when I heard these acquaintances were going to Paris and wanted to see their new home, I was surprised to find I would take it, without taking the precaution of examining it.

"The day after they left I went over to see if I had any more to rearrange. I saw I there were any little rearrangements I wanted made before moving in."

Already Taxed.

"He was a beautiful little dog," said the caller, doing her best to offer sympathy. "It must be a great bereavement to have to lose one like that. I am sure you will find a new one." "The oldernist?" "I think," said Mrs. Gofretquin, with fresh tears of tears, "we had already changed the faces on him. Chicago? Tune."

Strategy.

The lady missionary smiled.

"At last," she said, "I have been able to interest the unfortunate women of this benighted land."

"When one considered how very small the number of converts was, it was not altogether true, it was not surprising."

"At last," she repeated, with pardonable pride.

"But where did the family sleep? I asked of the woman left, by charge. 'Oh, no place in particular,' she replied, quite as if that were a matter of course; 'wherever they happened to be when they were asleep. Sometimes in the drawing-room, sometimes here; there are divans everywhere, you see.'"

"But didn't they take off their clothes?" I gasped in horror.

"Generally! but one doesn't need a bed chamber for that. One just rings for a servant to bring some negligee or nightdress, and the same servant takes away the clothes one drops off and fetches a drest-up over one."

"That was enough. The drawing-room had lost all its charms for me. Inquiry developed that when one woke up one in these haphazard beds in the morning, the servant, who came with a breakfast tray, and one ate where one had slept. Investigation showed that in the midst of all this luxury and host-
