DAISY WORK

Daisy work recommends itself to those who like what can be very quickly executed, and which costs little. It has another charm, and that is that it is easy to do.

Ordinary dotted muslin is the foundation of this pretty work, and the best quality is none too good for delicate work.

Very thin coarse muslin may look tolerably well until the curtains or the toilet table-covers or whatever the articles may be, are washed, but then it is miserable.

Daisy work may also be done for different uses on spotted ribbon or sateen as well as on muslin, and can, of course, be thus adapted for many different purposes. It will redeem an ordinary material without making it absurd by elaborate work. It is particularly a pretty finish for country couch or hammock pillows made of gaudy sateen and even for a finishing border to children's frocks and aprons.

In either silk of some spotted design, or in muslin over silk or sateen this work is particularly appropriate for night-dress sachets. Some very clever ones which look well on the fresh and snowy bed which every girl should have, are made in the shape of the "crackers" with which all party-going children are familiar. Each end may be gathered in with a ribbon or finished by a rosette, and the sightdress goes in through a slit down the middle. The case is, of course, stuffed with wool or wadding.

Small tea-cloths can be similarly made, and so may inexpensive little coverings for table-mats, the maker using her own discretion in adding elaborate linings or full frills of lace.

Two or three "sets" are impressive. Never pull the thread, never let the seams pucker, never carry the silk from one spot to another. Use only washing silks or fast colored cotton for whatever is worth doing is worth doing well. Spending once a time on fancy work that will not last is not doing well.

In the first figure the spots are treated with a like design, the pattern being so simple that it needs no explanation. Red cotton makes very pretty cushions for young folk's bedrooms.

Figure 2 shows a design with a raised border and is very pretty done in pink and pale green silk. The corners are worked with a satin stitching, done over the spot and four loops of purse stitch coming from it. Coral stitch is carried from spot to spot to form the Vandykes, and is employed to sew French knot which must be firmly fastened on the French knot description. The French knot is made as raised stitch over known, by passing the [illegible] round the needle one or more times, and then replacing the needle in almost the same spot. This gives a delicate little point of color very effective in many instances.

The design of the third figure makes it particularly suitable for window curtains or toilet articles. The original was done in red crosses with a yellow French knot in the middle. The stitch for the cross is picot stitch. Every spot, as you will see, has also a yellow French knot.

CROCHETTED ANTIQUE LACE

A DRAGON-FLY.

BY CLINTON SCOLLARD.

Bearer of the blazoned shield,
Arms of green on golden field,
Are you, in your hurry, bent
Toward some fray or tournament,
Where, while trumpets flourish loud,
You will ride erect and proud,
Challenging the stanchest knight
Forth to meet you in the fight?

Prithee, tell me, do you fare
Toward some Camelot of air?
I would know where may be found
Others of your Table Round;
"Blameless Arthur" I would see,—
All the "flower of chivalry."
But—how stupid—I forgot!
Are you—are you Lancelot?
