RECOLLECTIONS OF A "VISITING DAY."

BY WILL HARRY GANE.

WHAT morning could be chosen in preference to a spring morning for a visiting day, when all nature shines gloriously beautiful. The trees clothed in their gorgeous emerald robes with ever and anon bunches of white blossoms peoping through the envelope of leaves. The wayside strewn with flowers as beautiful as the gold tints, before sunset, while the birds warble snatches of songs as soft as the dreaming of angels. The wavy haze which surrounds the early morn breaks away, and the full glory of the day is upon us. O, how grand, and delicious and dreamy—it acts like some invisible agent to draw our thoughts from Nature to Nature's Architect!

On just such a morning, equally beautiful, we set out on our tour of inspection and pleasure. What a grand drive we had! Along the verdant highway, with great rolling fields on either side, hillsides crowned with forests, cottages mantled with ivy, brooklets, whose banks were fretted with myriads of flowers; over bridges underneath which the bounding stream hied merrily on, in which the finny tribe sported as though no great winged angel called CARE haunted humanity.

So we arrived at our destination—a beautiful rural school The teacher was orderly him house peeping out from a forest of shade trees—surrounded by a cellent government! spacious play ground on which were lying bats, balls and the usual Then came intermission, we requisites for healthy, invigorating exercise. In answer to our books, and usual commotion.

gentle tap on the open door, the smiling and courteous teacher greeted us. A hearty shake of the hand assured us of our welcome. What a secret there is in hand-shaking.

What a grand school-room we were ushered into! Ventilation so perfect and complete that the atmosphere of the room was refreshing instead of defreshing. It is a very great pity that some teachers under-value this great necessity so much as chey do! And such a band of happy, fresh faces greeted us as we entered the main door of the building. The children were facing the entrance, much the better way, and greatly to be preferred to the old plan of placing the seats the other way. It is annoying to a teacher to have his pupils turn around and gaze at every one who enters. But human nature is human nature.

Our entrance did not in the least discompose the teacher he was perfectly at home and continued his work, chatting pleasantly all the while.

We listened to the recitation of the several classes with much pleasure, and noted the interest every pupil manifested in his work—no inactivity or drowsiness in the class, but life and energy. We heard no thundering voice from the teacher commanding order—no stamping of feet or crashing of rulers on the desk. The teacher was orderly himself—that was the secret of his excellent government!

Then came intermission, with brightening of faces, closing of books, and usual commotion.
