Values need a coordinally imposit the last hour and a hair with only a slight rully as the final gong cleared the pit.

Agverse weather for the movement of corn brough, about a temporary stamped of shorts. A good deal of speculative buying was created to a proniment meat packer. Gains were not held and the market in the end was noticeably weak.

Outs followed the same course as other grain. Outerings on the sweets were ineral and came for the most part from dealers on the long side of corn.

Provisions ruled quiet but firm. The susuaming force appeared to be from commission orders based on the strength of the market for nogs.

A Letter to the Publishers

New York, Nov. 20th, 1913. Heart Songs came Saturday The girls were away, so they didn't get into it until Sunday afternoon. That H.S. is some book!

I was upstairs writing some dull stuff for a magazine when the old melodies came afloating up into my den. I couldn't write any more, so my wife and I stole down to the parlor and sat by the grate.

We have not had such a treat in years. The very air blossomed with melody.

These songs took us in memory back to the old farm, back to the double log house in the Southland, sweet with the honevsuckle and the jessamine.

They took us to the battlefield and colored it with glory and set the roar of the cannon and the crash of musketry to music.

They told us the pathetic tale of the black man, and the black mammy torn from all they loved, and we felt more humane and more

They bore messages of love from mothers and sweethearts to wandering boys, and brought back the vows of "ever true to you, ever true." They kindled anew the fires on the family hearthstone, and their light shone back to the very cradle. Heart Songs seem to sweep every string on the harpsichord of human emotion.

One page would lead us gaily through fields. of flowers, and the next one would moisten our eyes with the dew of tears. I can see why this book was called "Heart Songs."

We all thank you for Heart Songs. Respectfully yours,

(Signed) - EUGENE CHRISTIAN,

[The above letter explains itself. Dr. Eugene Christian is one of the best known authorities on scientific eating in the world today. His numerous articles, contributed to the press, and his many public lectures on this subject, have given him a standing second to no other in the chosen field of his life work.]
