AS A HOME GUARD.

Editor World: No person knows just when or where this war is going to end. Canadians may yet be called upon to raise a home guard. It would not be wise to at once begin the drilling of our old fellows? I am willing to give up my evenings for this purpose and to see that the men with each week at the butts to learn to use the Ross rifle. After all it is the fellows who can shoot to kill who will be of real service. I am not exactly green, but I have the new drill and the new rifle are a bit different from the old, and we need brushing up. How would it do to call a meeting of all citizens over to a meeting of all citizens at the armories to begin this work. H. C. F.

GERMANS FLED FROM BAYONETS

British Soldier Tells Story of Desperate Fighting Near Mons.

ENEMY SLAUGHTERED

Successive Charges by Germans Were Repulsed With Great Loss.

LONDON, Sept. 1, 4 a.m.—The following story of the fighting near Mons was told by an Express reporter by one of the British wounded who was brought here Monday: “We had left the shelter of a little forest and opened out, supported by the north country regiment. Our colonel warned us that the German infantry was advancing. “We had hardly extended ourselves prone along the grass when patches of blue and green were seen on the sky line and soon battalions of the enemy were made out following each other at regular intervals. “Our batteries let rip and gouged holes thru them. ‘Bravo,’ shouted the artillery commander as he watched thru his glasses. “Now the order was given to fix bayonets. Before the enemy arrived had a few minutes to get ready. It was an inferno. German aviators were directing their guns and at times we fired on aeroplanes but our shots were ineffective. Our poor gunners had an awful time. The German cavalry got around behind us and charged right up to the guns. Very few of the Germans escaped, however, for whole platoons rushed to the rescue emptying their magazines as they ran. “A moment later the Germans were on us from the front. We let them come until their breasts rose above the trench. Then they were decimated. They fell back in confusion and dropped to the ground. “Another line came which we treated the same way. Scores of machines were ordered to prepare to charge. “On the word of command we sprang from the ground and we advanced Prussians. As we neared their ranks we fired indiscriminately and only a few remained to cross bayonets. The remainder rushed off and were shot in the back as they went. They left more than half their regiment on the field in killed and wounded.”

The German press has organized two demonstrations, that were quickly suppressed by the government, whose actions are the object of comment.

These stations, completed only a short time ago, were to have been opened to the public tomorrow, the American station in the circuit being at Belmar and New Brunswick, New Jersey.

The control of these wireless plants in Wales, Mr. Nally said, would enable the British admiralty to keep in constant communication with its navy vessels anywhere within a radius of 3000 miles. He said he had been informed also that the British government had demanded the exclusive services of one hundred and fifty Marconi wireless operators employed at Welsh stations for assignment at government controlled plants and aboard British battleships. Mr. Nally said that England had taken over also the Marconi station at Clifden, Ireland, for part time use by the British admiralty. The Clifden station communicates with Glace Bay, Nova Scotia.
