At The Theaters

"JACK O' LANTERN" AT THE GRAND TONIGHT. To be the stage manager of ordinary dramatic shows is very much of sinecure in comparison to acting in which, if it be of the ordinary kind, in in turn is itself a light when compared to the work of stage managing a musical extravaganza of such magnitude as "Jack o' Lantern," which will be seen here tonight and twice Saturday. The man who runs the stage and things fot "Jack o' Lantern" is Frank Herbert. He is a very retiring sort of individual. It is doubtful if he has time to be otherwise, and if you search in the program for his name you will time to be otherwise, and if you search in the program for his name you will have to look way down toward the end, unless you come across it opposite the name of the character he plays in the first act. For, busy as he is otherwise, he plays a character that takes him well through half the performance. Mr. Mast is the first one at the theatre before the performance. He must be, because of the possibility of reported absences of cast members or like incidents, in which case he must busy himself planning relief measures, so that there will be no hitch. Then, after he sees that all the working crew is ready and at work setting up the first scene and has heard and adjusted the number of personal matters with the multifarious company members, he darts to his dressing-room to make up for his part.

First out of his dressing-room, he goes over performance details, such as seeing that everything is in readiness, the while his assistant is giving the last calls in the dressing-rooms, and the overture is playing, and prepares for his real work, compared to which his previous tasks have been mere tuning up.

want to say it was the best thing I ever did, for it very soon fixed me up in fine shape. I never had such an appetite as have now, and I'm never bothered a particle with indigestion or dizzy spells. "I have already gained thirteen pounds in weight and am feeling as fit as a fiddle. I sleep like a log the whole night through and get up in the mornings that to say it was the best thing I ever want to say it was the best thing I ever did, for it very soon fixed me up in fine shape. I never had such an appetite as in the dressing-rooms, and the overture is playing, and prepares for his readiness, the while his assistant is giving the last calls in the dressing-rooms, and the overture is playing, and prepares for his readiness, the while his assistant is giving the last calls in the dressing-rooms, and the overture is playing, and prepares for his readiness, the will have now, and I'm never bothered a particle with indigestion or dizzy spells. "I have already gained thirteen pounds in weight and am feeling as fit as a fiddle. I sleep like a log the whole night.

his previous tasks have been mere tuning up.

And if one should be privileged to go on the stage and there observe a quick-moving, active man darting about from place to place with never a stop except to do or say something hurriedly, it could be safely put down that he was Mr. Mast, the stage manager.

As complaint adjuster he is court As complaint adjuster ne is court of commonest resort, and as blame receiver he challenges all-comers. Some day, he avers, he is just going to blow up and let his mind and tongue run free, in which case there will exit from grace a perfectly-contained stage ever seen on a Canadian stage. In brilliance of coloring, architectural charm and beauty of design and execu-tion, it would be difficult to excel. Here again the solid nature of the scenery— the balcony and the entry to the house— lend verisimilitude to the action, and give to the entire action a vividness and a force it would inevitably lack othermanager.

"THE WANDERER."

One of the commanding figures in "The Wanderer," the great Biblical drama which comes to the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is Frederick Mosley as Jesse, the patriarch and father. He is austere, yet kindly, devout and altogether a Jew and a staunch believer in every ceremonial of the law. To him it was a great sin to travel on the Sabbath day or any holy day, for the law as handed down from Sinai forbade it. When Jether, his wayward son, insisted upon his portion that he might sisted upon his portion that he might go away with an evil companion, Jesse, being just, gave it to him, but as Jether went away in disobedience and in a manner to break his mother's production at Daly's Theatre, and is declared by Mr. Dolphin, who produced the show at Daly's, to be equal to the original in every respect.

Each scene is not only a picturesque thing in itself, but so constructed and colored as to constitute a perfect setting for the action and a harmonious background for the colorful costumes, the beauty of which has been enthusiastically commented upon everywhere the production has played.

The opening scene of the brigands' lair in the grim Sardinian mountains is impressive, and the subdued lighting lends additional romantic atmosphere to the action. Instead of the customary drops, this is a solid set, and that fact enables the company to play the scene in a most realistic manner without fear of any lack of conviction at any point.

The second scene, which depicts the courtyard of the governor's palace, is admitted to be one of the handsomest

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. hould give this prescription a trial.
