

BOURASSA'S IDEAS HOTLY DENOUNCED

French-Canadian Officer, Now at Front, Writes Scathing Letter.

STIGMA ON PROVINCE

Quebec's Reputation in Britain and France is Not Envyable.

Special to The Toronto World.

Montreal, Oct. 24.—Has Quebec done her duty in the present war? Is a question answered by Capt. G. Lanctot, who, after discovering that Major Asselin's regiment was going to Bermuda, got transferred to the 73rd Scotch Regiment of Montreal and is now doing his bit for the empire and the allied cause.

"All the English and French newspapers," writes Capt. Lanctot, "are full of compliments for the 22nd Regiment, which covered itself with glory at Courcellette. This may fill you with pride, but between you and me our reputation is not famous in Europe just now. In France, as in England, people are astonished at our indifference at the progress of the war. It is admitted that there have been circumstances to discourage recruiting, but what cannot be admitted, and especially in France, is the fact that certain newspapers in the Province of Quebec are carrying on an anti-ally campaign, throwing cold water on our enthusiasm that may be created, accusing the entire nation of having provoked the war, questioning Great Britain's full participation in the conflict, and injuring the prestige of France. The indignation, however, is at its height in face of the affirmation of a certain leader in Montreal who is not sure if one should wish a full measure of success to the allied nations. Before such an attitude as this high personalities of French public life, such as Mr. Hanotaux and

General Mallette, have used language of unheard of severity in this country, but which is perfectly justified.

Fatal to Nationality.

"That any man should preach ideas fatal to his nationality and become the friend of the Hun passes all understanding. It is, however, the sad truth, for it is evident that those whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad."

I have had an interview with Gen. Joffre, who spoke to me of the recruiting in Quebec, and also with the great minister, Lloyd George, and both spoke of the same question and does not this give you the desire to ship the Nationalists off to Greece or the United States with their colonial at their heels?

The Gallant 22nd.

"In your next letter you will tell me if public opinion is awakened in Quebec. If we still remain one of those nationalities which refuse to share the grand ideas of humanity, preferring to die like the Athenians listening to the demagogues who are brave in times of peace and shirkers in time of war. If you only know what all this means to us here who are fighting that our sons may have the right to march with the great armies of the other nations who are striving to bring about a reign of liberty and justice! We do not wish to see Germany extend her domination to the shores of the St. Lawrence, neither do we wish that our race shall be allied with the servile Greeks or the apathetic Americans. The 22nd French-Canadian division at the taking of Courcellette continued their record gained at Chateaugay and on the Plains of Abraham, and all we ask is that the 22nd may be sent here from Quebec."

Race Horse Owner Arrested At Windsor on Fraud Charge

Michael Burns, part owner of the Plattsburg stable and the race-horse "Safe Home," was arrested yesterday afternoon at Windsor on a charge of fraud. The complaint is laid by Maurice Kellier, proprietor of the American Hotel in Wellington, and Yorkville, who claims that Burns failed to pay his board bill for August and September, amounting to about $25. Burns, who is a well-known figure in the racing world, was last night being held in Windsor.

WAR SUMMARY

THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

TAKING advantage of the German preoccupation with Roumania, and with the allies on the Somme, the French opened yesterday a great offensive from Verdun. The first German knew of what was coming was the sudden opening of one of the greatest artillery bombardments of the war, of an intensity defying adequate reply. At 11.40 o'clock, at the word of command, the French infantrymen swarmed from their trenches on the eastern bank of the Meuse and rushed forward, overwhelming the Germans as they advanced. Prisoners soon began to pour in as the French continued their progress, under the protection of their curtain of fire, and by nightfall 3500, including 100 officers, had been counted. As a result of their success the French occupy the old positions that they held after the first few days of the German offensive in February. Douaumont Fort, Douaumont Village, Thiaumont Work and Thiaumont Farm, the Haumont Quarries and other important landmarks, were speedily occupied.

As a result of this successful action the French, by last night, had established their lines along the road from Bras to Douaumont, and the following positions: Along a line drawn north of Callette Wood, the western outskirts of Vaux Village, the eastern border of Fumin Wood and north of Chenois Wood and the Damloup Battery. The Germans offered comparatively little resistance and the French losses were slight. The attack was launched on a comparatively narrow front, it looks as if it were intended to proceed. It is in a theatre of narrow dimensions, but it promises decisive results if pushed to a logical conclusion. Two or three more days of such fighting would suffice to break the German front and to make a breach thru which troops could pour down the eastern bank of the Meuse upon Sedan, cutting the German troops in western France off from Metz and the Rhine. Westward from Metz runs a great trunk railway by which the German armies in northwestern France are mostly supplied.

The fact that the French were able to penetrate the German front to a depth of two miles in one afternoon gives reason for believing that the German have been completely broken. If so, this ally may drive clear thru the German lines in three or four days and decide the war in the next few weeks. The notion of creating another Sedan, this time for the Germans, and of discrediting the crown prince as former head of the German war party, would be one that would appeal to French temperament. Its achievement is not beyond the possible, and the theatre chosen for the blow is adapted by nature and the lay of the railways for that eventuality.

It is almost certain that an opening was given the French for an attempt that gives promise of starting success by the withdrawal of troops from the front to fight the Roumanians. Such a move would be characteristic of Von Hindenburg and his simple, almost barbarian mental limitations. In order to gain some transitory but dazzling success, he is the man to risk everything on a gamble. It was said before that if the Germans undertake another offensive that offensive would fail and the war would be ended the sooner. This declaration may turn out quite true.

The greatness of the French achievement is seen from the fact that their coup at Verdun has regained in a single day virtually all the ground lost in the battle that began last February. It took the Germans two months in wresting this territory from the French.

The taking of 1000 prisoners alone, besides inflicting further large losses in killed and maimed, and suffering only 1200 casualties in doing it, was experience of the British army in storming a five-mile front on Saturday. St. Douglas Haig, in announcing this fact, thus exposes the falsity of the German assertion about the British suffering heavy losses.

On the Roumanian-Transylvanian frontier the Germans have advanced down the Predeal Pass and they have taken Predeal Town, on the railway leading from Kronstadt to Bucharest. The fighting appears to have amounted merely to the pushing of the Roumanian lines back beyond the town, for the Roumanians have suffered no serious mishap. The struggle is still being continued along the borders of Dragostavla, but the Roumanians are attacking the Roumanians violently in the region of Dragostavla, but the Roumanians are holding their positions. In the Jiu Valley the Roumanians slightly receded before the allies. The Roumanians attacked and repulsed the Germans on the left and they are continuing the fighting with violence. At Otius they attacked the Germans on the whole front and took 312 prisoners and ten machine guns. Concerning the Dobruja operations, latest reports put a better complexion on the situation. The Russians and Roumanians, probably because the heavy artillery had been borrowed where it was needed more, withdrew their right wing to the heights that extends from the coast of the Black Sea to the Danube. These are more easily defended than lines in the open. Their left wing still covers the Cernavoda Bridgehead.

The best feature of the situation is the continuous arrival of the Russians, whose strength will soon begin to tell in the struggle. A communication, issued at Petrograd yesterday, reports that the czar's forces are confronting the Germans in the Trotus Valley, along the Buzet-Dobruja-Kimpung line, and at Orsova, on the Danube. In the first two sectors the enemy remains repulsed by the Russian fire.

Altho the Germans officially asserted that they had halted the Serbian advance, the Serbians, who have also something to say in the matter, have refused to be halted, and so their first army has made another advance along the whole of its front, storming Bulgarian lines, and the second army, the Serbian Vardar division, has been heavily engaged with the Serbians and Bulgarians. These violently attacked the Serbians all day Sat. by worsting the Bulgarians in another encounter. British patrols have discovered the presence of German troops on the Dolna front in virtue of a raid.

TWO BIG RALLIES SUNDAY EVENING

Recruiting Organizations of Toronto Call for Response to Borden's Appeal.

MASSEY HALL AND LOEW'S

Prominent List of Speakers Includes Premier Hearst, Mayor and Sir John Hendrie.

As an immediate response to Sir Robert Borden's appeal issued yesterday asking for 100,000 more recruits for Canada's army, officials of recruiting organizations and public-spirited citizens are promoting two recruiting rallies, which will be held at 8.30 o'clock Sunday night. One meeting will be held at Massey Hall and the other will be held at Loew's Theatre.

Announcement of these meetings was made last night by Capt. Oliver Hazlewood, who, with Commodore Jarvis and Dr. Abbott, are acting as leaders in the movement.

Sir John Hendrie, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, will preside at the Massey Hall meeting, and Premier Hearst, Justice Riddell and Col. R. Cecil Williams, chief recruiting officer of the Dominion, will be introduced as speakers, while Col. H. H. Brock will preside at the rally at Loew's Theatre and the speakers will be Mayor Church, President Falconer of the University of Toronto and N. W. Rowell, K.C., Col. Brock is director of national service for this district.

That there will be a more than satisfactory response, represented in the enlistment of many recruits, to Premier Borden's appeal is the conviction of those who are arranging the two meetings. Toronto, it is argued, has contributed whenever a call has been made, and on this occasion will again demonstrate her loyalty and patriotism to the British Empire.

Premier Borden's appeal was impressive in that it is his first nationwide call to arms. He desires that 100,000 more recruits are needed, and appeals to those of non-military age who from other causes are unable to go as well as to those of men who should be in khaki. He says that many are needed for home service in necessary industrial and agricultural work.

Practically all arrangements are completed for the Belgian relief "Tag Day," which will be held in Toronto tomorrow, Thursday, Oct. 26, at the Toronto Belgian Relief Committee, 30 West King street.

The committee urges the people to support this cause, which is approved and aided by the British government, permitting the Belgian workmen to refuse to work in the factories or on the railways for the Germans. A starving Belgian soldier, for instance, releases a German soldier for his services, and Canada, the committee claims, can never fully pay its debt to Belgium.

The people of Toronto on this day are earnestly asked to give all they can. The members of the committee are Mrs. Arthur Pepler and the hon. treasurer is Miss Isabella L. George.

"Lid Lifters" at Star Theatre Entertain Wounded Soldiers

For over one hour yesterday afternoon 450 convalescent soldiers of the German staff military hospital were entertained by the "Lid Lifters" company, who are appearing at the Star Theatre this week. WOMEN STOLE THE CAR.

Nancy Wilson, alias Nancy McArthur, and Alice Walt, alias Mrs. Jackson, rooming at 193 Jarvis street, were arrested yesterday by the Cobourg police on a charge of stealing a motor car from Pearce Walker, a monument maker of Collingwood, Ont. Detective Montgomery brought the women back to Toronto this morning.

According to the police, Walker, about a week ago, came to Toronto on business and went to room at 193 Jarvis street. As he was preparing to go downtown in his car one day, the two women asked to give them a lift. He did so. Then they persuaded him to allow them the use of the car for a short time. They then drove off in the motor car, and he was left with the woman motored to Cobourg.

The Toronto Detective Department is in receipt of a request from Chertsey, J. E. Burgess, of Detroit, to locate the relatives of James McIntyre, who was shot by a policeman about two weeks ago in Detroit. McIntyre was shot by a policeman up a number of Detroit citizens. A policeman interfered, and in the pistol fight which ensued, shot and killed McIntyre. The body is in the morgue there.

London, Ont., Oct. 24.—Definite preparations are being made by C. P. R. trainmen for a strike, and orders have been given for them to walk out at five o'clock tomorrow afternoon. "Quarters for the men have been secured," said an official of the union here today, "and unless word is received in the next few hours calling off the strike we will proceed with our plans."

HAMILTON KILTIES LEAVE FOR EAST

Hundred and Seventy-Third Given Great Send-Off at North Toronto.

MEN IN FINE SPIRITS

When Leaving Borden, Battalion Gave Three Cheers for Gen. Logie and Staff.

Five hundred relatives and friends of the members of the 173rd Highland Battalion (Hamilton), including Mayor Church, were at the North Toronto station between five and six o'clock last night to accord a send-off to the regiment as it passed thru this city on its way from Camp Borden to a point further east. The 173rd was the only Highland overseas unit in training in No. 2 military district. It had been at Camp Borden all summer.

The battalion traveled eastward on two trains, the first carrying "A" and "B" companies, and the second, "C" and "D" companies, also the staff, including Lt.-Col. W. H. Bruce, commander.

Each train of Highland soldiers was given an enthusiastic send-off. The men themselves were in fine spirits and expressed an intense desire for the opportunity of greeting their Toronto friends, even if only for a brief 20 minutes.

The brass band of the 21st Bantams Battalion was stationed on the railway platform and played appropriate airs, including "Tipperary," "Highland Laddie," "Auld Lang Syne" and a lively march by Sousa. The latter time evidently being in honor of the United States-born members of the battalion, the Highlanders having received a draft of 150 men from the 21st "American Legion" two weeks ago.

Just before leaving the Camp Borden station, the 173rd formed up in battalion order on the platform, and gave three cheers for Major-General Logie and the headquarters staff. It was the first occasion during the portings from Camp Borden that a unit had thought of according the staff officers this honor.

IDENTIFY HERO OF SOMME FILM

Soldier Who is Seen Rescuing Wounded Man is Driver T. Spencer, Burnley.

PATRONAGE IS STEADY

Rialto and Globe Theatres Handle Large Crowds From Morning Till Night.

The British soldier who, in the official motion picture of "The Battle of the Somme," is seen rescuing a wounded man, is Driver T. Spencer, Burnley.

Spencer is described as an "unknown hero who rescued 20 wounded men," and in the Somme film is not only seen running across a field under fire with a man over his shoulders, but is again photographed as he is carrying a wounded man, and added: "I am pleased to say that I was wounded in one day, so with a bit of luck, there will be more honors in the family."

He had completed ten years in the navy's service a short time before the outbreak of the present conflict, and also had two years' previous army experience. Mrs. Spencer's third son, Frank, was a member of the 1st Battalion, and has gained the distinguished conduct medal for gallantry in Gallipoli.

Steady Patronage.

Steady patronage at both the Globe and Rialto Theatres during the first two days of this week that the pictures have been exhibited attests to the phenomenal success of the Somme film. Most of the seats in both houses occupied during the day, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning, and after the doors are opened, and lasting until 10 o'clock, an hour before the show ends in the evening. While there is not the crowd or congestion which marked the first week's exhibition, yet the picture is being seen and enjoyed steadily throughout the day at the two theatres showing the film this week.

Many thousands of spectators saw the film last night, pronounced it most remarkable and marvelous production the world has ever known, and hundreds more people are taking the opportunity to witness it this week. "A special music and accommodation being provided at the Globe and Rialto has been favorably commented upon by spectators since the film opened its second week in Toronto."

The Somme pictures are extraordinarily realistic. They show all the grim horrors of warfare. The men are seen to leap over the parapets, and so vivid are the photographs that the spectators feel that they can hear the word of command. The camera spares nothing, and in doing so makes its reproduction the greatest moving picture known to date. If there was anything needed to justify the expense of the motion picture camera machine it is to be found in this reality of the series of moving photographs.
