They were bound to supply only one meter to a building, and in cases of apartto a building, and in cases of apartment houses, where now they maintained often twenty meters, they would take out all but one. They had to inspect the meters monthly, whether gas were used or not, he said. They bought their gas on the meter readings from the generating company. They were merely a distributing company.

There had been no complaint from the consumers in the six years they had done business in the city. The city had no right to go into the matter. The company, he contended, had the right to make whatever arrangement they liked with they liked with the individual con-sumers. Mr. McIntyre intimated that in his opinion the board had the right to adjudicate in such matters.

Mr. Waddell put in P. B. Byrne, president of the company, to prove the contract form. Under cross-examinanation by the company's lawyer he put in figures to show that average use of gas by consumers justified the

H. H. Dewart Contends in Public Accounts Committee That Economy Was Forgotten;

Granted.

The Ontario Railway and Municipal Committee yesterday reserved judsment in the case brought by the City of Hamilton for an order declaring the United Gas and Fuel Company's minimum charge of 80 cents a month to be illegal.

City Solicitor Waddell's argument was to the effect that the company was bound under its charter to supply the citizens without charge for the company, insisted that they were not so bound, that their rate was justified, and that they could not afford to do business on other basis. The charter did not bind them to make a minimum charge, they argued.

The opinion of D. M. Mcintyre, chairman of the board, appeared to be from the argument that while he would not contest the justice of the company's contention that the rate was a justifiable one, he did not know that they had a right to go outside the provisions of that charter.

To show that while they preached thrift they practiced luxury and extravagance in the furnishings of the sovernment house, H. H. Dewart, K. C., in the public accounts committee yesterday, read a number of items of expenditure on furnishings of the state-noom, $1,423; Donegal rug for the state-noom, $1,423; Donegal rug for the drawing-room, $389."
