THEY WERE ALL PLEASED

Board of Trade Men Had Pleasant Visit to Kingston School.

W. S. Fisher, J. M. Scovil, E. A. Schofield and T. H. Estabrooks, of the board of trade, drove from Hampton last Friday to Kingston, where they looked over the consolidated school. Speaking last night of their trip Mr. Estabrooks said that it was a most pleasant one and to his mind proved the value of manual training in the schools. He said that the principal, Prof. D. W. Hamilton, showed them over the building.

There are, he said, 175 scholars attending, twenty-five of whom are from outside places and board in the village. The average attendance, he was informed by the principal, is 95 per cent. Mr. Estabrooks thinks that if those in this city who are opposed to the introduction of manual training in the schools would visit Kingston, a great change would come over their views.

Kingston, a great change would come over their views.

Besides the regular studies, nature study has a large part in the curriculum and the scholars are encouraged to form collections of leaves, flowers and weeds. They saw some of these collections made by boys from eight to ten years old, and the opinion of the visitors was most favorable. All those who attend the school work from the primary department up to manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls. Every boy has his work bench and tools, and as a proof of the interest in the work he says that many boys spend their recesses in the work shop rather than play. These boys are from fifteen to seventeen and he says the work they turn out is simply wonderful.

Besides the work in wood there is a miniature experimental farm conducted on the grounds and the boys are taught in a practical way methods of tilling the soil and raising crops, Mr. Estabrooks thinks that if every school in the country had such a plot for the boys to raise grain more would stay on the farm and their success would be greater. Mr. Hamilton, the principal, is a graduate of the Guelph Agricultural College and Cornell University.
