Australian Visitor Thinks People Do Not Fully Appreciate Gifts

Miss Reed, Exchange Teacher, Gets Fossil Specimens at Museum.

Miss E. R. L. Reed, of the department of botany of the University of Western Australia, in Perth, paid a flying visit to the city yesterday and called at the Natural History Museum, having been specially directed to that treasure house of scientific specimens by Dr. Gertrude Wright, of the department of botany of the University of Toronto, and as far as is known this is the first exchange of college lecturers that has been arranged between a Canadian university and a university in another part of the Empire. Miss Reed arrived in Canada in January of this year, landing at Vancouver and making the trip to Toronto in winter time she saw western Canada with a mantle of snow.

SHOOTING RAPIDS.

During her summer vacation she spent some time camping at North Bay and then traveled eastward by the Great Lakes route, being specially thrilled by the new experience of shooting rapids.

NEEDS SETTLERS.

The great need in Australia just now Miss Reed considered to be increased immigration. She spoke of the complete success of the immigration schemes which are taking large numbers of British settlers to her homeland. The government is making generous grants and giving assistance in settling the newcomers on the land. Australia is a large proportion of its total area suitable for cultivation. The old central area of Australia Miss Reed said, was not accurately described as desert since after one of the rare rains had come in that district the land was covered with a mantle of lovely flowers. This dry land is irrigated in some sections where artesian wells have been sunk.

PLEASED WITH N. B.

Miss Reed has been much impressed by the beauty of Canadian scenery, especially with the Canadian Rockies. She was admiring the valley of the Pettitodine River as she was traveling towards Saint John yesterday and was somewhat surprised when she saw the conductor of the name of the mountains to have him glance disparagingly out of the window and say, "O, mountains! they are just hills, I don't know that they have any special name." This incident led Miss Reed to believe that New Brunswickers were not taking sufficient pride in the beauty of their country. She is keenly interested in observing quick to notice and ready to be pleased.

At the Natural History Museum Miss Reed was specially interested in the fine collection of Indian relics and in the herbarium.

Put Real Mustard in Your Kit

Right at the top of the list of camping necessities is a tin or two of real Mustard. Men who fish and men who shoot know what a spiciness and flavour mustard freshly mixed with cold water adds to the ham, bacon, fowl, venison and other good things they eat in camp.

ing her holiday time and she was directed to the Natural History Museum and to St. Andrews by Dr. A. G. Huntsman, of Toronto University, who is also director of the biological station at St. Andrews.

FOSSIL SPECIMENS.

Although she spent but a short time at the museum yesterday, Miss Reed found Dr. William Macintosh, the curator, a mine of information and through his interest she has secured for the University of Western Australia a collection of fossils from New Brunswick. Dr. Macintosh has undertaken to get together some interesting fossil specimens and to forward them to the department of botany in the Australian University.

YOUNGEST UNIVERSITY.

The Western Australia University, Miss Reed says, is the youngest of the state universities in Australia, having been first established shortly before the outbreak of the war. It has had a strenuous time to become established but it is now over its crucial period. In Australia women and men are on an equality in the matter of educational opportunities and women are received as members of the faculty on the same standing. There were women members of the law faculties and the fact that there were no women in the departments of engineering and forestry she believed was simply because no women had taken up those branches of study for lectureship.

NEIGHBORS ANGERED BY "FOR SALE" SIGN

Protest Homeowner's Offer to Sell to "Negroes or a Jap."

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Neighbors and real estate brokers called yesterday upon Frank Horvath at his home in Flushing, in an effort to persuade him to remove from a post in the front yard a sign that the house is for sale to "respectable negroes or a Jap." They were unsuccessful, and the sign is still there. The house, a two-family brick structure, is in a section recently developed, where there are more than thirty homes, most of them occupied. Horvath said he had stood the taunts of his neighbors, but that when the Superintendent of Buildings in Queens ordered him to take his automobile out of the yard, following a complaint made by neighbors, he was "ready to fight." He said he would not give up until the house was sold. He did not indicate, however, whether applicants other than negroes or Japanese would be considered as purchasers.

COMPLETES COURSE.

Miss Myrtle Crawford, daughter of Provincial Constable and Mrs. Robert Crawford, returned recently from Emerson School of Oratory, Boston. Miss Crawford is a member of the teaching staff of the Winter street school.

There were three automobiles in the garage, all of which were destroyed. The loss is estimated at more than $4,000 and is partially covered. The firemen made their usual prompt response to the alarm and were able to keep the fire from spreading to the main building and offices of the company.

Greatly Helped at Lady Byng Camp

Case of Two City Lads Given as Instance—Some More Contributions Come.

The funds of the Lady Byng summer camp for delicate children were increased by $15 yesterday when Miss Beryl Harding presented $5 and an unknown donor left $10 at the Health Centre. Miss H. Dykeman said yesterday that the financing of the camp was causing some concern as donations had been much fewer than had been expected during the last few weeks.

What the camp can do in transforming pale, skinny and apathetic little boys into robust youngsters full of life and vigor was well demonstrated yesterday when two boys returned to the city after spending the greater part of the season enjoying the camp privileges. They were two brothers, the eldest 12 years old. When he was first located as a Lady Byng camp case he was carrying out as best he knew all of the duties of housekeeper for the family. His mother was in hospital and his father was away from home all day. The 12-year-old was doing the cooking and it cannot be said that he displayed any aptitude for that occupation, he was tending his younger brother and supervising the household generally. It was a sorry-looking household. The youngsters were sent away to the camp and the father fended for himself.

MOTHER BETTER.

Now that the boys have returned they have gone back to a far different home. The mother is back from hospital and although still ailing, is able to shoulder some of the burdens of housekeeping, the family is established in a comfortable home and the children are in good time to return to school when the term begins. The 12-year-old had been out of school since the winter as household cares had him in their clutch.

Camp life at Fair Vale has been running along without any jolts or jerks. Everyone is thriving and everyone is entering wholeheartedly into the camp spirit. There has been just one excitement that has been outside of the planned programme. One of the boys in camp has night terrors and walks in his sleep. Those in charge of the camp are trying to cure even that abnormal tendency. A slack rope has been placed beside the bed of the sleeper and he takes a soft tumble before he gets very far.
