Eugene B. Lewis' Social Drama

"WHAT EVERY WOMAN LEARNS"

Is the Joking, Jolly Husband a Success?
IF YOUR WEALTHY GRANDFATHER ON HIS DYING BED admonished you to marry a light-hearted, joking sort of a chap and leave the serious, sober-minded ones alone, would you do so? The heroine of this very gripping domestic drama, out of sheer love for her grandparent, did what he advised. The superior chap, who was outwitted because he did not come up to the dead relative's specifications as to jollity, was finally forced to assert his "right of the heart" as the story very prettily shows. This is not a silly sex yarn, but a consistent, edifying—and warning—human document.
