Steamer Iroquois Sold Liquor at Moresby Island Wharf-Fine Inflicted.

In the provincial police court this morning an interesting case came up when a fine was inflicted upon Alex. Gordon, of the steamer Iroquois, for selling liquor on the vessel contrary to the provisions of the Liquor License Act. The fine will be paid by the steamer, according to the statement of Mr. Gordon, who was employed as purser on the vessel. The latter explained that he was not acquainted with the provisions of the act which was violated, and had therefore acted in ignorance that he was doing anything against the law.

The charge laid was that Mr. Gordon had sold liquor to a person who was not a passenger on the vessel. This was done at the wharf at Moresby Island.

Magistrate Hall explained that, cacording to the license held by the steamer, there were only two classes to which liquor could be sold. These were members of the crew and passengers of the steamer. In view of this the accused pleaded guilty. He explained at the time that Moreby Island was understood to belong to a private party. There were no licensed houses there, and he had been under the Impression that he was within his rights however, said that this was not a proper construction to put upon the law.

had been a violation of the Liquor License Mr. Gordon further pointed out that it was not known to the purser that these men were not passengers, as they came aboard at the wharf and might be taking passage. The magistrate said the purser was obliged to acquaint himself with the fact,
