Brought Good Price.
The three-masted schooner Fred B. Balano, 253 gross tons, built at Bath in 1902, and recently haling from Philadelphia, has just been sold to the Boston and New London Shipping Co. for about $20,000—a big price for a little schooner.
The German Mines.
There have been numerous reports of floating mines on the U. S. coast and the entire fleet of mine sweepers has been ordered to comb the coast with even greater care than they have been using to make sure none of them are allowed to remain where they will become a menace to navigation. Mines should go dead after they have been down a reasonable time, but it is feared that among some of their other peculiarities the Germans forgot this rule and planted some that will remain active until something hits them; it is on this account that the careful sweeping is being done. There are nine reports of definite locations now being considered.
Uncamouflaged Ships.
Portland, Dec. 5.—Whatever may be the fate of the shipbuilders within the next few months there will be no lack of work for the painters for a long time to come. Orders have been given to uncamouflage all of the American ships as soon as they may be withdrawn from the other nations that have given the decorative process have given so there will be work for some time to come in that line. The new steam engine at the Cumberland installation plant will never have a chance to even go to sea with her war paint on as orders have been given to paint her gray and the work is now being done. The other vessels that were partly camouflaged will never be finished but in due time they will also be painted gray or whatever other solid color is determined upon as being the right one to be used.
Capt. Leonard W. Oliver of Bath, in his seafaring career for a number of years, has just been given command of the big collier Calkeys, which is to leave for Portland, and which is to leave for the West Indies, returning to Portland. Capt. Oliver has been in Nova Scotia since early summer, where elaborate preparations were made for refitting the collier Lake Houghton, wrecked on Cranberry Isles, a big collier dam having been built around her, when the heavy storms of last week wrecked the collier dam and broke up the craft, which is now scattered for miles along the shore. The Calkeys is owned by the Coastwise Transportation Co., of Boston, as was the Lake Houghton.
