

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT RENFORTH LAST NIGHT; SEVEN YEAR OLD GIRL KILLED BY JOY RIDERS

The car was driven to the city by the driver, who was taken to the hospital and is expected to recover.

Mr. Dalton took occasion to measure the distance from where the car left the road until it struck the little girl, and found that it was about two hundred and two feet. From this it can be seen that the automobile must have been travelling at a rapid rate to go such a distance and then stop within forty feet after it struck the building, and further that the brakes had not been applied.

Two of the young men being held at headquarters, were taken to the station after being brought into the city by automobile, while the detectives took the others into custody on the street.

It was some time about 10 o'clock when Mr. Dalton, the owner of the car, was surprised when young Beverly walked into the Imperial Theatre and informed Mr. Dalton that he (Beverly) was the driver of the automobile that was wrecked at Renforth.

Mr. Dalton informed the Standard last night that as soon as he was told about his car having been stolen he left the theatre, procured another automobile and drove to Renforth. He said that he found his car piled up in the culvert, a legless man, and does not know whether it can be repaired.

Late last night, as the four young men were assembled at the police headquarters, Beverly was walking around nursing a swollen jaw, and stated that he (Dean), who was the driver of the car, was the one who was taken to the hospital.

WRESTLING THE NATIONAL GAME IN FAR OFF JAPAN

To the "divine average" of the Japanese nation—the commoner—January is the month of months, for in January the celebrated wrestling matches take place. This year an immense new arena designed to be used for the annual exhibition of strength and skill, was opened with much pomp and ceremony, at which time the enthusiasm of the Tokyo crowd knew no bounds, since the successful contestants in the ten days' competition are looked upon in the light of national heroes.

The Japanese wrestler excites as much interest here as the champion baseball player does in America. According to legends in the history of wrestling may be traced back to a man named Kobo, a man of unusual strength, who lived in Yamato Province, about 25 B. C. His wonderful muscles were a source of delight to himself and of envy to many admirers. But pride in Kobo's case took a fatal turn. He was called before the emperor to meet another "strong man" one Sukune, who attacked his opponent with utmost vigor and threw him with such violence as to break his hip. The fall was a fatal one.

In 508, A. D. Emperor Hojo ordered men of strength from all parts of the country to come to his court, there to exhibit their prowess and skill, and for a long time after this wrestling in Japan shared honors with military accomplishments.

Public matches first took place in Tokyo in 1822. About the year 1820 the temple enclosure of Edo became an established centre of wrestling exhibitions. The wrestlers are strictly graded and take rank according to grading.

The wrestling arena is arranged after the following manner: The arena proper is raised a trifle above the ground, and is usually shaded by a canopy supported by four posts. The first post is wound around its upper section with a green band, the second with red, the third white, the fourth with black. A purple curtain ornamented with white plum-blossoms is draped over the top of the posts.

Before the wrestling begins the arena is sprinkled with water to sanctify it. Rice is offered. Prayers are made to the gods at a shrine which is always found near wrestling arenas. During the match the wrestler is naked save for a strong loin cloth and a sash colored short apron. The simple carries a fan in his hand. This he waves when the contest begins, and with it he points at the successful wrestler by way of announcing his victory. As the religions of Japan, says Mr. Chamberlain, in his essay on wrestling, are in noviss Puritanical.

It must be very amusing to anyone who does not desire to hear words used without regard to their meaning, to listen to the official chatter about "permanent" roads in New Brunswick. Dirt roads are not permanent and cannot be made permanent. To call them permanent in justification for the expenditure of large sums on them, is to murder the King's English after wasteful use of the public money.—Chatham World

A Real Bat Looks A Lot Like Bottle

After all it's the bat that breaks up both games. A lot of players spend more time trying to get a flock of bats in their rear clubs than they do reading up on the new rules. Most all the stars have their bats and all put their name on 'em and all that. Heine Groh of the world's champion Reds spent a lot of time last winter figuring out how he could avoid his batting average this season and so he created this bat. Heine's idea of a real badger resembles the contour of a very "familiar" bottle that used to be quite popular before last July. He made one of these formidable appearing bats in his own workshop. Pat Moran believes the guardian of the difficult corner on his team will bring in many runs this season with the new creation. Heine claims the length of the grip gives him a wonderful feeling in meeting all kinds of pitching. All the weight is in the right place to slam the ball a crushing blow which will drive it out farther than the ordinary club, with the same effort. Groh used his new creation in the opening game at Cincinnati against the Cubs and belted the Reds to their first victory of the season. He reaped a double and a single. If that's the kind of a bat he has created all the Reds will be wanting to use it.

Heine's new bat is 32 3/4 inches in length. The balanced section is 15 inches long. The thick section is 3 3/4 inches around and the grip measures 3 1/2 inches. The bat weighs 48 ounces. It's new and it works.

WHY IS IT

that chronic skin diseases which have defied all other treatments yield to Zam-Buk?

It is because Zam-Buk is germicidal, and also has such power of penetration that it reaches disease in the underlying tissues and cures from the "root" up. That is the only way a permanent cure can be effected.

Mr. H. G. Buckley of 461 E. Broadway, Portland, Oregon, says: "For chronic skin diseases there is nothing like Zam-Buk. For fifteen years I had eczema, and I tried an endless number of so-called 'eczema cures,' but nothing was capable of curing me permanently until I used Zam-Buk. Ten months' use of Zam-Buk has effected a complete cure."

For ulcers, abscesses, boils, ringworm, blood-poisoning, piles, burns, acids and cuts, Zam-Buk is equally good. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 506 Box 3, for $1.35.

London, April 29.—The text of the declaration of London, signed by France, Russia, Great Britain and Italy, in London, April 26, 1915, was published textually in Parliamentary papers today. the conclusion of the war, was to receive Trentino, part of Southern Tyrol, Trieste, Istria, and Dalmatia. The four powers signatory to the document agreed not to conclude a separate peace. The declaration bore the signatures of Sir Edward Grey, then British Foreign Secretary; the Marquis Imperiali, the Italian Ambassador; Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador; and Count Benckendorff, the Russian Ambassador.

10. That the cost of administration of Workmen's Compensation in each province be borne by the government of that province.
11. That rules and regulations for prevention of compensation be made by the board, and approved by the committees, composed of employers and employees, be established in the various places of employment, and further that first aid appliances be installed at the various plants; all the foregoing to be under the direction of the board.
12. Where under any Compensation Act, the employer has the right to bring his employees under the Act by election, such election should have the same right where a majority so decide.
13. That in cases of death or injury all claims be based on a uniform scale of compensation.
14. The committee's report was accompanied by a valuable comparative table of Workmen's Compensation legislation in the different provinces.
