

FELL DEAD ON FLOOR; FATHER AW ASLEEP ON COUCH NEAR BY

Sad Circumstances Surround Death of Edward McConnell Friday.

"GOD BLESS DADDY," LISPED LITTLE GIRL

Last Words As He Left Home in Morning--Contents of Bottle in Pocket To Be Analyzed--Corner Roberts Investigating.

Stretched lifeless on the floor of the same room in which his father lay asleep on a couch, the dead body of Edward McConnell was found Friday in a house at 625 Main street by William Connell of 10 City Road. It is believed the unfortunate man fell to the floor in an intoxicated condition and smothered to death, as his face was closely pressed against the floor when found. There was nothing to indicate foul play, though coroner Roberts said last evening that he had not yet decided as to whether or not an inquest would be held.

McConnell was about 25 years of age and lived at 14 Adelaide Road with his wife and one child. He left home yesterday morning at 7 o'clock and his movements during the forenoon seem to be wrapped in mystery. He was employed in the Portland Rolling Mills, and his wife thought he was going to work. It is supposed, however, that he obtained liquor and, neglecting work, called at his father's home in the basement at 428 Main street. There his father, John McConnell lay sleeping on a sofa, and without arousing his father the other is supposed to have fallen forward on his face, and either from weakness of heart or from suffocation, met his death.

Met Fearful Sight.

William Connell, a bright young man and a distant relative of the McConnells, called at the house a little after 12 o'clock, and as he entered, the place seemed to be unusually quiet. Entering the sitting room he saw the lifeless form face downwards and the father asleep on the couch, a few feet away. He called to the father, but he did not answer. He then turned the father's head and saw that he was dead. He then called out to other occupants of the house, and George Marshall who was eating his dinner up stairs, responded. He turned the father's head and saw that he was dead. He then called out to other occupants of the house, and George Marshall who was eating his dinner up stairs, responded.

Mr. Marshall notified Police Sergeant Kilpatrick, who viewed the body and made no investigation. Coroner Roberts was then notified and made a careful examination. There were no marks of violence, he said, with the exception of a bruise on the temple, which might have been received in the fall. There was no trace of poisoning, and to him it looked as if there was a possibility of suffocation.

Mr. McConnell went to her work in the car cleaning department of the I. C. R. and did not return until afternoon. Miss Mary, the only other member of the family, remained at home. There were no other occupants in this part of the house.

"God Bless Daddy."

The dead man leaves his wife and one child, his parents and one sister. His wife said last evening that the last words spoken when McConnell left his home yesterday morning were by his little girl who with both arms around her father's neck, lisped as usual, "God bless you, daddy."

County Attorney Holmes completed his opening of the state's case, and 54 witnesses for the state were sworn. Before court adjourned late in the afternoon one witness, City Engineer Coombs, of Bangor, had been called and cross-examined.

County Attorney Holmes, in his opening aroused interest in the case by his statements that he would try to prove the intimacy that he said existed between Roberts and Mrs. Dickinson, who was tried jointly with Roberts previously, but who was acquitted for lack of evidence. Mr. Holmes stated that his evidence would be circumstantial in connecting a ship three weeks before the murder with the Dickinson house at about the time of the murder, that Roberts had threatened Dickinson's life and that the motive of the crime was the desire of Roberts and Mrs. Dickinson to "do away" with Dickson.

Engineer Coombs explained maps and plans to the jury and at the close of his testimony the court adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.
