JHC Engines Furnish Ample Power at Lowest Cost

A N engine that develops more than its rated horse power, with the lowest possible expense for fuel, needs only one other feature to make it the best engine a man can buy. That feature is durability. The engine which combines these three qualities, ample power; low fuel cost, and durability, is an

IHC Gasoline Engine

In an emergency, an I H C engine will develop from 15 to 30 per cent more power than it is sold for. Because of its scientifically correct mixer, it uses less gasoline to develop that power than is required by any engine not so equipped. It is durable because only the best material is used, put together with the precision of a high-priced watch. For work on farm or estate, in mill, shop, or factory, wherever reliable, dependable power is required, an I H C engine is the one best buy.

I H C engines are made in every style—horizontal and vertical, air and water-cooled, stationary, portable, and mounted on skids, to operate on gasoline, kerosene, distillate, or alcohol; sizes 1 to 50-horse power; kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12 to 45-horse power.
