took 700 barrels off it. There was no house, but a fine barn, measuring 100 by 40 feet, and good underground stables. The price of good land hereabouts averages from $60 to $100 (£12 10s. to £20 16s.) an acre."

"My father took a farm of 100 acres," says another friend, "worked it for over 30 years, and gradually enlarged it to 216 acres. It has now been sold for $10,000 (£2,082). The purchaser, by the way, is a man who has been farming in the rough country in the north of Hastings County, but he has made enough to make a substantial payment on account."

We are all sorts, we Old-Country folk. For a few adventurous
