

something more than "the emptiness of ages"; to see, with Froebel, that there is a divine idea for every child which education must find and develop. But to see this is to hope.

Michael Angelo, it is said, one day saw a great block of stone in a quarry. "Send that to me," said he, "I see an angel in it."