MASSACHUSETTS HAD MORE FIRES THAN IN ANY YEAR SINCE 1872.

Poston May 19 .- Massachusetts had more fires and suffered a greater loss in 1914 than any year since 1872, as is shown by the official figures which have compiled by the State Police, and which were made public to-day. The total loss in the Commonealth last year was $26,194,270, as compared with $10,995,580 in 1913.

The reason for the great increase in property damaged and destroyed was the Salem conflagration of and London and Globe, has been visiting San Francishet Jame, but even from that viewpoint the loss while countries in the loss while countries and loss will be said in the liverpoor and loss will be said to be said in the liverpoor and loss will be said in the liverpoor and loss will be said to be said in the liverpoor and loss will be said to reater than in 1908, when Chelsea was fire-swept and the total loss was fixed at $21,338,866. The official increase of 205 over the previous year.

It is assumed that future taxation will be based on surplus and that the supply of water was inadequate bedone told that the supply of water was inadequate bedone to the parties of the parties of a case which have repeatedly not the fourts of the parties of th

AN IRREPARABLE LOSS.

Fire damaged the farmhouse of John Eastlack, of Pitman, N.J. The only serious loss was the singing of Eastlack's whiskers, for which he was famous in the town where he lived.

The New York Commercial publishes the above.
