SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

FOURTH QUARTER :-STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

A. D. 93. LESSON VIII. THE GLOBIFIED SAVIOUR; or, Christ Abiding with His Church. Rev. 1 . 10-20. NOVEMBER 23.

EXPLANATORY AND PRACTICAL.

Verse 10. In the Spirit.-In a state of trance, wherein connection with surrounding objects is suspended, and the mind is lifted up to a mysterious communion with the spirit world. The Lord's day. The first day of the week, kept by the early church sacred in honor of our Lord's resurrection. As of a trumpet. A loud, clear, penetrating tone in the charactistic of the trumpet-note. 1. " When Christ speaks to men it is with no uncertain sound,"

11. I am Alpha and Omega.—The first and last letters of the Greek alphabet; used as emblems of the first and the last. But the clause is omitted by all the most ancient manuscripts, and doubtless should have no place in this verse. What thou All that was to be revealed in the vision, the entire Apocalypse. In a book. Ancient books were made of papyrus, or from the prepared skins of animals, written upon with a pen, and rolled upon a roller. Seven churches. The message was sent to these as the leading churches, and as each a distinct type of church-life. 2. "Though Christ is in heaven, he has a deep interest in his church on the earth. In Asia. Not referring to the entire continent, nor even to the entire peninsula of Asia Minor, but to "proconsular Asia," a strip of territory on its western end, along the shore of the Ægean sea. Ephe-The largest city of the district, situated in Ionia, great in its commerce, celebrated for its wonderful temple of Diana, and having a flourishing church planted by the Apostle Paul. Smyrna. Forty miles north of Ephesus; and from the earlist Christian ages until the present, the seat of a church. It has now a population of one hundred and fifty thousand, and is the centre of extensive missionary influences. Pergamos. In the province of Mysia, once possessing a great temple to Assculapius, and one of the largest libraries of antiquity; now having a population of thirty thousand. Thyatira. In Lydia, a Macedonian colony, once celebrated for its purple dyes; still a considerable town, named Hk-hisar. Sardis. A famous city, anciently the capital of the Lydian kingdom of Crosus, situated by the river Pactolus, now in ruins, and containing a few miserable mud-huts. Philadelphia. In Lydia, about thirty miles south-east of Sardis: a considerable city, despite several destructions by earthquake. Laodicea. In Plurygia, between It was des-Colosse and Philadelphia. rade.

12, 13. Seven golden candlesticks.—Seven separate lamp-stands, emblematic of the church whose mission is to "hold forth the word of life." 3. "Note the unity and diversity of the church-seven lamps-yet one light." 4. "The church's business, that of the lighthouse, not to be the light, but to hold the light." 5. "The church's preciousness and loveliness in its Lord's sight, golden in all its parts." In the midst. 6. " Christ is among his churches, to nourish their light and watch their works." Like unto the Son of man. A name that was applied in the early church to Christ alone; and indicating his human nature, and brotherhood with man. A garment. A long, flowing robe, such as was worn by the high-priest, pointing to his priestly relation to his church. Girt about his paps. Or around the breast. While common people wore the girdle around the loins, kings wore golden gird.es covering the bosom. 7. Thus Christ unites the priestly and the royal functions of his office as Redeemer.

14, 15, 16. His head .- His forehead. White like wool. Not in material, but in color, is his hair compared to fine white wool. Eyes as a flame. Indicating his reserve fund to be used as occasion demandomniscience. His voice. Compared to the resounding waves of the ocean, which John must have often heard in his islandprison. Seven stars. Not as a bracelet, but held in his hand, the object of his care and possession. From verse 20 we learn that these represented the "angels" of the churches. 8. "God's m nisters are his precious treasure." Out of his mouth ...a sword. His word, the utterance of his lips, is compared to a sword, (2 Thess. 2.8), as the weapon with which he conquers the world.

17. 16. I fell.—The invariable effect of the divine appearance before human eyes is alarm and terror. 9. " Not until we are like him, can we endure to see him as he is." He that liveth. "The living One." the one in whom all life originates and from whom eternal life proceeds. Was dead. The one who has passed through death, triumphing over it. Have the keys. The key is the emblem of authority. 10. "Christ alone has power to ransom from the grave." Hell. "Hades," meaning "the place of departed spirits," not that of the lost forever. 19, 20. Thou hast seen .- The vision just beheld. Which are. The present state of the churches when John wrote, revealed to him by inspiration. The mystery. The secret signification. Angels of the seven churches. Probably meaning the ministers in charge of them, and who stand as their representaves.

GOLDEN TEXT .- I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty. Rev. from "ould Ireland" loved to hear him sing present existence.

The next Lesson is Rev. 3, 1-13.

THE REFUGE OF PRAYER. Poor heart, so weary, so burdened with care, Hast thou not sought it—the refuge of prayer? No wonder thou'rt tired and filled with doubt, Like an helmless ship tossed ever about. O cease for a moment that plaintive strain; Glad would I case it, that throbbing pain. List till I tell of the wondrou retreat, Thou'lt find it low kneeling at Jesu's feet, Thither go thousands, all careworn and sad, Thence coming with become lightsome and glad.
There too I have been and again will go, In jey or in gladness, in weal or wee. Life hath its joys, but so too hath it grief, For which, earth can offer no equal relief. Then fain to this refuge of prayer I would flee Pleading merciful Jesus pity Thou me!
Poor heart, I have tried it, and know what I say, That never one yet was sent empty away, From the life giving streams of this bower of rest thither, come thither, sad heart, and be blest. Oxford, Oct. 27th, 1879.

A STORY FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

TOM JONES.

The hero of my story was a man remarkable in many ways. His personal appearance was remarkable. He was for height like Saul among his fellows, broad shouldered withal. and humorous-looking, with a merry twinkle in his right eye and a green shade over his left, and as he walked his step was like the tread of an elephant. His powerful arms hung by his side like the leavers that carry a steam-hammer, and his huge hand, as it gripped you, made you feel as a child in the grasp of a giant. He was just the style of a man to knock down a bullock, or to fell a tree, or to handle a hot-tempered bucking colt, or to reduce a rowdy to order. Such was Tom Jones, Old Tom, or Mr. Jones, as he was respectively called by the circle in which he moved. Those who knew him best called him Old Tom, and those who had but slight acquaintance put the handle to his name and styled him Mr. Jones. But if he was noteworthy in body, he was no less so in mind. In this respect he was a diamond, but a diamond in the rough. Born amid the hop-gardens of Kent, of parents who were the mere serfs of labor, "dragged up" in a home where the iron law of necessity made work binding upon the young ones as well as upon the old ones, his education had been an education of the muscles rather than of the mind. To hoe turnips, to drive the plow, to hill up potatoes, to grub in ditches, to feed the pigs, with other kindred tasks, had been the labors of his boyhood; so that when he had grown to young manhood, he found himself, to use his own graphic style, " as dark as a Hotmetot." But if he owed little to schools, he owned much to nature. He had given him a good stock of common sense, a bright, genial temper. a rich fund of humor, which lubricated the wheels of his own life, and which often served to lubricate the wheels of others, and added to all a wit which often made his talk sparkle like the glancing and many-colored light of a prism. Tom, Old Tom, Mr. Jones troyed by an earthquake A. D. 62, but re- was a character. There could be no two opinions on that point. And if any body, on a first acquaintance, took the measure of the man from the roughness of his coat, or the rusticity of his manners, or the comicality of the green patch over his eye, and tried "to take a rise" out of the huge farmer, they very soon repented of their folly. A smart joke, a witty thrust, or a crushing stroke in the way of repartee, made them feel as if they had burnt their fingers, and they dropped him as if he were hot iron

His wife was a perfect contrast to himself. She was short in person, with a plain, kind face, and a voice that seemed in the gentleness of its tones to be the witness of a kind gentle heart. "Sairey," as her fond spouse used to call her, pursued the even tenor of her way with quiet goodness, and formed the chief joy of her life in the pleasures that she both gave and gathered in the circle at home. She had feared God from her youth, and the peace of heaven, like an atmosphere of summer, gave to her character much mellowness and beauty. Undemonstrative though she was, there was a good deal of decision of character about her, which she kept like a ed. Often her more impulsive partner found it acting like a brake upon the wheel of his impetuous nature and though sometimes the friction generated by that repression made him feel rather hot and impatient, as a general rule, his good sense came to his help and he found that wisdom and safety lay in submission. She had an obscure station, and a rough, prosaic slab-hut for her dwelling, but she lived in it a life so true and noble, that it became a very center of sweetness and light, and the satisfaction of duty done came to bless it day by day with perpetual benediction.

In the early days of their wedded life things had not gone so smoothly. Tom was then young and foolish. His social nature, his merry turn, made him a pleasant companion; and often the quips and pranks and laughter which he reeled off without limit, under the inspiration of wit and wine, made him the magnet of his circle, who courted his society because, by common consent, he was pronounced to be a "right down jolly good fellow." The wayside inn, with the winsome sign of the "Traveller's Rest' was his favorite resort, and the trysting-place of his companions of the cup, who loved a good joke and a good song. In the little parlor of mine host, the merry crew often gathered with Tom as their hero, who played the part of clown so well that he kept the company in high good humor. The "b'hoys" DOCTRINAL SUGGESTION. - Christ's | Minstrel Boy," and "The Harp that once thro' Tara's Halls." The lads from the land wha' hae wi' Wallace bled," throwing into it servations. The first figure that caught their all the fervor of a genuine Caledonian-or, eye was that of the preacher. His compact as he turned their thoughts into a more pa- and well knit form hardened by labor was thetic mode by the song, "Ye banks and brace o' Bonnie Doon." For the Englishman he would reserve his favorite air of " Home, broad, honest face was bright with the ra-Sweet Home," because it brought back to him so vividly a vision of the blossoming as they looked up to the dingy roof overhead, hedgerows and bright green fields of old England; and as he sang the tears that would would gather in his own eyes would start the tears in others, until they all got sentimental together. And then, as a grand finale he would swing the company into another temper by rolling out "Rule Britannia," until the place rang again with their uproariousness, and all the glasses jingled and danced as the heated feeling of the group came down to crashing strokes upon the table, as they thundered out the chorus. These amusements inside were occasionally varied, by diversions outside, and a running match, a horse race, or a few rounds with the gloves. for Tom was a good boxer-wasted time which might have been put to better account, and wasted also the substance which might have gone to increase the comforts of home, and the character which might have been a spared such produgal misuse of its best gifts part, all meeting together at length, and and opportunities.

At this point in his history Tom first heard of the "Methodys." Away in the quietness of the Australian bush the settlers know little of religious ordinances. The Sabbath-that comes to the weary and the toil-worn in busy town or crowded city like a blessed respite from the work and the worry of life, when all the air, so filled in the restless week with the noise and din of trade, seems hushed into quietness, and when there breaks forth through the stillness the joyous music of church bells inviting to work and worship-has little to mark it off from the common hours of life to the remote uplands and sequestered valleys of this great land. But the enterprise of a Methodist local preacher had invaded the religious wilderness of "The Meadows" and already many had been lifted up from the earthliness and sensuality of their life to the pursuit and enjoyment of the best things, The fame of Steve Hart, the Methodist revivalist, had swept through the district like a bush fire in midsummer. Some laughed, some swore, some denounced the impudence of this canting, psalm-singing, sniveling fellow, who had come to "convart" the district. And some vowed that they would put their foot on the whole business and kill it out right with as much satisfaction as they would a brown

"Tom" said Dick Swivel, "we'll go and sing 'em down. We'll drown 'em straight with such a hurly-burly of noise that they'll go down before it like the old dead logs that go sweeping down over the falls at Nacka Nacka."

preach 'em down," chimed in Hiram Whitlock. "You can reel off your chatter, Tom, as you do at the 'Travelers Rest;' and if that don't put an end to the fellows jabber, you can fling some of your best jokes at his head and they'll knock him over as if he were hit by the stroke of a boomerang."

comes. I can polish him off with a stroke of and the glen, the rivers and the lake, the this," holding up his great, horny hand, and, peeping flowers and the burning stars, all clenched his fist, and brought it down with a thud that made the seat upon which he sat | came to him with messages from his Father quiver with the force of the blow.

on the next meeting-night at the home-stead under the hill. A chain of noble mountains spread like an engirdling wall around the lovely valley in which the preaching place up the ranges, and swept down over the unfor the roasting heat of the day that had best in the human heart, for the sublime beautiful were there, and over all a sense of the infinite brooded, as if to hush the clamor and abase the pride and still the passion of man. The weird cry of the curlew came sweeping up the flat, and as they topped the rise that looked down upon the spot which was the goal, they heard the voice of singing, and so they pricked their steeds into a canter and hurried up.

The building in which the settlers were gathered for worship was of the rudest kind. Slab sides, a bark roof, an earthen floor, a few rough-hewn seats without backs, and a very primitive-looking table for the preacher's stand, with legs that had more substance than shape, constituted this bush meetinghouse. Persons of very fine æsthetic sensibility would have seen in it little to admire and much to condemn. And yet many a time it had been filled with the glory of God, and from it, as from the stone pillow on which Jacob lay down to sleep, there was a ladder in his mellowest tones, the song of "The on which the angels came and went on ministries of mercy.

Hitching their horses up to the fence, Tom o' cakes hung with admiration on his strains and his party drew near to the only window gently swaying from side to side, as his manner was, keeping time to the music. His diance of his happy sonl, and the clear eyes, seemed to go far beyond into the heavenly places, and flashed with the brightness of the vision. At his right was Aunt Dinah, with her silver hair and her placid countenance, that told you she was walking through the Beulah Land, and saw the city on the other side of the river where she was to rest. Uncle Joe was on the left of the preacher, almost as poor as Lazarus, but as happy as a king. Looking round upon the rest of the company, they saw rough-bearded men, and mothers with a good sprinkling of babies, a fair proportion of braw lads and winsome lasses, all seemingly absorbed in the business which engaged their attention. The little company were singing one of the grandest hymns that ever stirred human feeling to an odd old tune, that wriggled in and out and ran up and down as in a strange fantasy, in which one part seemed to be chasing another rushing in with a glorious sweep of song, in which all joined with the greatest gusto. As the party at the window listened, their hard and bitter thoughts melted like ice in the sun, and their courage in a bad cause seemed to steal away. When the worshipping group reached the last stanza, and Steve's rich voice—that was as clear as a bell, and as tuneful as the music of a harp-gave forth the tenor, while the rest carried on the air. the words and the music moved Tom as by a spell. Fond of singing as he was, he was touched by the melody--he felt a strange quivering at the heart, and as they repeated the last two lines according to our old he said: "Boys, I am not going to stand nere looking down the chimney. I am going in by the fire." The magnetism of his example, which in so many instances had led others in a wrong direction, was in this case powerful to lead them in a right. They fol-

> His blood can make the foulest clean, His blood avails for me.

The text was in keeping with the hymn.

It was the assurance which has dried up so many a mourner's tears, and brought hope into so many a despairing breast: "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Catching the spirit of the passage Steve talked to the people in a strain of such overpowering tenderness that few could resist it. He was not a preacher, only an exhorter, as he often laughingly said. Yet preacher or no preacher, he had a wonderful faculty of opening out the meaning of the ery, and when we consider its great useblessed gospel. Of logic he was as ignorant fulness and extremely low price of ($25). as he was of logarithms, but his heart was a it is very difficult to conceive of any infountain that had been filled to the brim from another fountain, the infinite mercy of a loving Saviour. In the course of his talk he would break every rule of syntax, but he would talk straight to the heart, and reach it, too, despite bad grammar. He was fond of pictures, especially of God's pictures, as they were spread out in the world around him; "Av. boys," said Tom, "and if the worst and the mountains and the valleys, the forest things bright and beautiful and glorious, which he knew full well how to interpret as The plan of action arranged, they muster- he stood before the people. He was a warmhearted Northumbrian, who had served a rough apprenticeship in the mines of his na- rapidity rendering it impossible to count tive moors, whose talk had about it an aroma them; it has more attachments than any which didnt please every body, but which stood, their sharp, clear outline standing out was to common folks as the scent of wild with the utmost distinctness against the stain- flowers. The parables of Jesus were to him less sky that rose above them. The moon a very mine of wealth, in which he dug as almost at the full had risen above the eastern for hid treasurers; and to-night he is in one hills, and a flood of silvery brightness lighted of his best moods. He has enlargement, he has deliverance, he has caught the spirit of dulating tract beneath, covering broad reach- his theme, and is bathed in it. His tones es with a softened beauty which made the tremble with a simple pathos that is irresistadeep shill with a simple pathos that is irresistative deep shill with the picture all ble as he speaks of the lost, and the bright liable household necessity, extending its the more fascinating. All overhead the silent beves are veiled in a mist of tears. And as he stars, thick sown throughout the clear hea- advances in his subject to speak of that tenvens, looked down with a rare splendor that | der, pitying, suffering, dying love which ga- paper. AGENTS WANTED by the is not seen in the denser atmosphere of more there to its embrace the vilest sinner, many northern climes. There was a dewy fresh- a face quivered, many a silent tear fell, and ness abroad that was all the more welcome the feelings of that little company were shaken by the preacher's word as the leaves of just closed. Altogether there was something the forest are shaken by the blast. Among in the scene that appealed to all that was those who were so deeply moved was Tom Jones. In the prayer-meeting which followed, Steve, wrought up into a state of high excitement, pleaded with his hearers in an intensity of feeling which made his very frame tremble. "Coom noo," he said, while his voice went through the place like a blast of a trumpet. 'Coom noo to Jesus. There's sin behint ye, and death before ye, and ruin beneath ye, and Christ beside ye, waitin' to save. Ye're fire doomed; flee to the escape ladder. Ye're storm-driven, and the ragin' tempest, and the black rocks, and the surges are greedy to devour ye; tak' to the lifeboat. Ye're wastin', sinkin', dyin'; there's fever in the blood, and the cold death sweat on yer brow; but here's the balm that will

> There was a pause. Tom's great chest had heaved during this last appeal with the deepest emotions; still he struggled against his feelings, and strove to keep pack his tears; but it was all in vain. And so, while yet the words of the preacher were ringing on the ear, lifting up his huge arms, and staggering forward under the burden of a new, strange grief, he cried out, "Blessed Jesus! I'am lay in the Anodyne. It is the most value coming, I'am coming!" "Halleluia!" shout- able liniment in the world, heal ye. Tak' it! tak' it! TAK' IT NOO!!!"

as he gave forth the patriotic air of "Scots, which the place boasted, and began their ob- ed Steve. "Amen!" said Aunt Dinah; while Uncle Joe laughed with such gladness as makes joy among the angles when the sweep their harps to a higher strain over sinners as they turn to God. Meanwhile Tom continued in the struggle for deliverance. Kneeling down at the front seat he lifted up his pleading face in prayer, and, as he rolled to and fro in his anguish, weeping and struggling for peace, he seemed like the patriarch. when, under the load of his midnight bitterness, he wrested with the angel. The conflict was a long one and a bitter one. All the past rose up before him as he knelt-the songs, the oaths, the revels-all the folly and all the wrong of his life started up to rebuke and to mock him, until he groaned out. in sobs and broken words, the confession of his guiltiness. At length the glimmer of the dawn seemed to break upon him. Steve Hart was whispering in his ear the message which so often has changed midnight into morning: "He was wounded for your transgressions, he was bruised for your iniquities; tha chastisement of your peace was upon him; and with his stripes you are healed:" and with that there came the first streak of light that heralded the day. This was followed by singing. They had reached the

> Stung by the scorpion sin. My poor expiring soul, The balmy sound drinks in And is at once made whole

When Tom got a vision of the cross and the crucified One, and as they exultingly sung the last couplet, his faith, inspired by the glorious truth which it breathed, laid hold of the Saviour, and, mounting to his feet, with a full heart he joined in the

See there my Lord upon the tree, I hear, I feel, he died for me.

"Yes!" he shouted, "for me, for me-for the double-dyed sinner, Tom Jones!" and as he shouted, he leaped in the ecstacy of a joy which was to him as life from the dead There was a great calm, and with the calm a great brightness. As when the blackness of a stormy night gives place to the glowing light that comes forth from the gates of a cloudless morning, and howling winds are hushed to rest, so was it here. He rejoiced with a joy unspeakable and full of glory. His was a "powerful conversion." as he used to call it. "Sairey." said he, when he reached his home. "I am richer than a prince; I am as happy as an angel. I have found Jesus." And Sarah hung upon his neck and wept, for was not this the answer to her pravers?

The invention of that Superior and Complete Sewing Machine (The Family Sewing Machine), marks one of the most important eras in the history of machinvention for domestic use of more or even equal importance to families. It has great capacity for work; beautiful, smooth and quiet movement, rapid execution, certainty and delightful ease of operation, that commends it above all others. The working parts are all steel, strong and durable, and will last a life time, the bobbins hold 100 yards of thread; the stitch is the firmest of all the stitches made, neat and regula , and can be regulated in a moment to sew stitches from an inch in length on coarse material down to the fines, so infinitesimal as to be hardly cernable with the naked eye, and with a other, and it does to perfection all kinds of heavy, coarse, plain, fine or fancy needle-work with ease, and far less labor than required on other muchines. It needs no commendation, the rapid sales, increasing demand, and voluntary encomiums from the press, and the thousands of families who use them, amply testify to their popularity each day. This popular machine can be examined at the office of this company. Address them for information FAMILY SEWING MACHINE CO.,75 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

> 115 Grafton Street, Halifax, N.S., August 26tn, 1879.

In February last I had a severe attack of Lumbago or Rheumatism which completely disabled me—the pain in my back was so severe that I could scarce walk or move; I had also pains in my head and all parts of my body. Nothing that I used did me any good until I tried GBA HAM'S PAIN ERADICATOR. A few applications to my back took the pain from it; but the pain still remained in my head and other parts of my body until I met the proprietor of that Medicine and found tion I used his ROYAL DIAMOND CONSTI TUTIONAL REMEDY, internally, and applied the PAIN ERADICATOR to the back head and spine. Their combined 1180 soon cured me, and I did not use quite bottle of each. I believe that no one need fear or suffer from Rheumatism of Neuralgia if these two Medicines are pro-C. F. F. SCHOPPE perly used.

A western prper says that "by this time all down easters have got their house banked up and have laid in a supply of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment." It would be a wise thing for people hereabouts w common poro electrical appl remedy for La Female Weak Kidneys, Sp.n porous plaste Benson's Cap nothing else. Mailed on re son, 21 PLATI

GATES' LI

From the Roots

merly manufac

who was prono and Dropsy b

producing seve physician, she cured hundred public through sent couside preservation o last 35 years, i certificates we week to week medicines are plants of the Man Roots, Sa and Female N 3 Bitters. No's in a liquid are without gripi other medicine worse state tha healthy tone an medicines do no ed and may be kinds of Humos Sour Stomach, 1 Dyspepsia, Sick Colds. Coughs, St Heart Disease, Stoppage of Men Complaints, Cons chitis, Erysipelas All admit so effective was known. If if you are troubl medicines, be cure turn of life will fin Young ladies in womanhood above out them, they are period. Mothers their daughters wi little lives away w may be cured, their away by the timely We do not preter a perfect cure for eligent mind knows only wish to make do and no more, ment to those wh trial, their judgmen it must be the sar given. We wish to are prepared with use, and also ad health, remove disc state that no fau These medicines scientific principle with the medicinal as well as the effect the system, conse It has become an system becomes l seated in either the lar parts of the boo by cleansing the 1 der lets go its hold nal standing. A strike at this, the should not have an blood is the grand comes the duty of and unbealthy, to much of our co glect, especially in few lottles of N which will extracts

For sale racing Manufacture

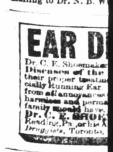

regulate the haur

vate the sy tem.

$55.66 Agent

AGENTS For the WANTED BRADLEY, GARRETSON

FREE BRONCHITIS.

JOHNSON