

touched his finer feelings that instead of pouncing upon the poor bird and taking its life away, the mastiff showed it the utmost consideration and evinced a great deal of anxiety about it. More than this, the dog evidently conveyed to the fowl by some means an invitation to consider his kennel as a sick ward, for the bird took up its abode there, and even continued to reside in it after the fractured leg had been completely healed.

"The dog and fowl became fast friends, and it was quite a common sight to see the mastiff walking about with his winged companion perched on his broad back."

Mr. Tyndall on Boys.

The Rev. C. H. Tyndall gave the children one of his famous object-lesson talks on "Temperance."

Taking out of a bag a balloon which looks like any other balloon, he held it up and told the children to look at it.

"Now you will see what a difference there is between good boys and bad boys," he said. "You might think to look at this balloon which I hold in my hand that it would go up if I let it loose. But it won't. A bad boy will never rise in the world, and neither will this balloon."

The speaker suddenly let the balloon loose, and it fell on the platform, bounced around a second, and remained stationary.

Taking out of another bag a balloon similar in appearance, Mr. Tyndall held it in his hand for a moment that the children might see that it was an ordinary balloon. It was fastened to a long thread, and when he released it, it bounded into the air as high as the thread would allow it to go.

"That's an illustration of your good boy," said Mr. Tyndall.

Then he fastened the two balloons together. The balloon which had risen in the air was dragged down by the one which had fallen. "That shows the evil of bad associates," said the speaker.

Then Mr. Tyndall placed something covered with a handkerchief on the pulpit rail. He fastened the thread of the good balloon to this something.

"Sometimes," he said, "little boys are good until they reach a certain stage. Then something holds them down and they can go no further, like this balloon. Do you want me to show you what keeps more boys and men down than anything else in the world? I will show you."

Lifting the handkerchief a wine glass filled to the brim with red liquor was revealed. "That's the evil of intemperance," said the speaker.

Help for a Child.

When Mary Bond was only ten years old, she saw a poor, hungry, shivering child in the street. Her mother said, "You ought to make a frock for that poor little girl."

"I will, mamma," said Mary, running off for her work-box.

When she came back, and had got some stuff to make the dress, she sat down very eagerly, her little heart beating fast with pleasure. But after a bit she came to her mother with a sad face, and said, "I have been trying, mamma, and I cannot do it."

"Why did you not ask me to help you?" said her mother.

"Oh, would you help me? I thought I was to do it all by myself; but I was determined to make the frock."

"I will help you, and I will do the hard parts for you," said her mother.

"Oh, how nice!" cried Mary; "if you will help me, mamma, I am sure it will soon be done, for I am determined" (that was a favorite word with little Mary) "to work hard and do my very best."

If this little girl had not had her mother to help her, she could never have made the frock. But if her mother had offered to help her, that would have been of no use unless Mary put her mind and heart to it, and said "I will do it." So you see that two things were wanting—Mary must try and mother must help.

Yesterday I was reading in my Evening Chimes about the promises I made to God when I was a babe. I promised to fight against that wicked enemy, the devil, who sometimes puts angry or naughty thoughts into my heart. But how can a little one like me fight against that dreadful being? I could not do it unless the Blessed Lord helped me. But He says He will, and when I pray to Him, I feel that He does help me.

And so now I am determined, like little Mary Bond, to do my best to conquer my laziness, and learn my lessons well, and dress quickly and tidily; and I will not think about how I look in my best dress, and I will every day speak the truth, and be kind to my brothers and sisters.

I am afraid I shall sometimes forget what I have promised; but God can help me to remember.

Hints for Boys.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves before him. Out of the whole number he selected one, and dismissed the rest. "I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy without a single recommendation?" "You are mistaken," said the gentleman, "he has a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful; gave up his seat to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful; he took off his cap when he came in, answered my questions promptly and respectfully, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly; he picked up a book, which I
