anyone, receiving per acre maximum tax when the chance of a break-down in fuel and allowing $1.00 per day for furnace and $2.00 per day for men. I have always taken the chance of a break-down in fuel weather when threshing, and put my crew to digging furrows. They prefer it to laying around—at less than threshing wages. Seven hundred bushels at $20.00—about four and one-half cents per bushel. About this year have been higher than before. A. S. F. Manning, Ark.

Sir Horace Plunkett, chairman of the fish convention, at a luncheon given in Cork on September 25, said that the convention had made him hope we had never hoped before that we should live to see a change of heart out of which a new Ireland would be born. This, said Sir Horace, had been made possible by the great English and expression of opinion between the
