come true?"

"Why, Mamma, what do you mean?
How can I do that? I don't even know what people dream." She was quite roused from her dreamy mood, and sat looking at her mother in astonishment.

"I do not know, either, Florence." responded Mrs. Easterly, smiling at the inquiring face before her. "But I know what some people might dream in the daytime, if not at night. You have seen them quite lately, too."

lothes. I was thinking just before I went to sleep how thin his were for this cold weather, and she sighed, thinking of the rheumatism, which often prevented the husband and father from working tor them.

A moment later, a knock on the door sent Mrs. Schmid to open it. A man bearing a large basket entered, followed by Florence, who had wished to be the bearer of her own gifts. She was fully repaid for all her trouble, by the bright faces of the girls and their evident appreciation of the baskets. Minna was telling what she had been thinking the night before, when Mrs. Schmid, who was unpacking the basket, uttered an exclamation which caused them all to look up.

to look up.

"My dream came true," she cried, hugging the under shirts in her arms. "These are the very ones I saw in my dream."

"What does your mother mean, Minna?" asked Florence, almost in alarm, for the tears stood in the poor woman's eyes.

"Tell your mother, Miss Florence," said Mrs. Schmid, "that she must have known what I warted most of anything in the world just now," and she told of her dream once more.

warfed most of anything in the world just now," and she told of her dream once more.

"No, my dear, I think not," was the reply "Why do you ask?"

"I have been reading a story about a poor little girl, who dreamed she was in juch a nice house, where everything was bright and warm. I was thinking how badly she must have felt when she w'e and found it was not true."

Florence was a very sympathetic child and a deep sigh followed her last words.

"Well, Florence," said her mother, taking a fresh needleful of thread, "why don't you do something to make somebody's dream come true."

The Buffalo Commercial the other day had the following editorial:—

The Commercial is not in the least impressed by the perennial "scare" about the defenceless condition of the lake region. It is, and always has been, a "fake" warned over by young newspaper men, who are quite taken with it the first time; by correspondents at their wits' ends for topics, or by promoters of ship-canal jobs, who always play this card when the game needs bracing a little.

"I do not know, either, Electuag," responded Mrs. Easterty, smiling at his quiting face before her. "But I know what some people might dream in the days and the proper suggested from the days of the property of the propert

A DUFFERIN CO. MIRACLE.

Ernest Duke's Great Peril and Wonderful Escape.

How His Life was Saved After His Condition had Been Declared Hopeless by Three Declors—An Interesting Narrative Given to a Post Reporter by the Boy's Mother and Other Witnesses. ifferin Post, Orangeville.

The great Edmund Burke once exclaimed in a moment of sadness and despair that the age of chivalry was gone forever, and on every side of us we hear it remarked that the days of miracles are a part of the dim, superstitious and romantic past. We are not going to enter into a discussion on the merits of either statement. Much of the chivalry that we read of had a great deal of the wild and grotesque about it, while not a little that was attributed to miraculous agencies was the work of men of talent and genius, wiser and greater than their generation, who had explored and comprehended the treasures of Mother Nature within whose bosom is said to be locked a panacea for every ill of fallen flosh. A newspaper's chief mission is to faithfully and attractively record interesting current events and to make such comments and suggestions as it deems advisable, and it is this role The Post is desiring to fill in this article. The neighboring township of Mono furnishes an instance of marvellous cure, which in less enlightened times would undoubtedly have been credited to supernatural influences, and which has even in this stern and practical era created a genuine sensation. In a recent issue we gave the particulars of the restoration to physical strength and activity of George Hewitt, of Mone Mills, through the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People, which are now household words on this continent. Many who read the article on Mr. Hewitt might be disposed to doubt, but the least credulous were silenced and convinced by the striking evidence of the patient himself, evidence which was corroborated by several reliable persons who had an intimate knowledge of the facts. The fine banner township of Mono supplies equally striking and conclusive testimony of Dr. Williams Pink Pills as an effectual remedy where the physician's skill and knowledge have been nuterly baffled. Men may be disposed to be sceptical, and to fancy that much that is said in praise of these pills is mere hyperbole, but it is hard to confront the logi

"To what do you attribute the boy's recovery?" the reporter asked.

"Oh! to nothing but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a covery?" the reporter asked.

"Oh! to nothing but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," was the ready and emphatic response of Mrs. Duke, who is a very intelligent lady, and who then gave the interviewer the following interests and well-nigh incredible narrative: "Last winter Ernest had the grippe, and he never seemed to fully recover from the effects of it. In February last, some time after he had the grippe, he was so unwell that we took him to Dr. Bon nar, of Mono Mills, who examined him, and said that what was troubling him was a decaying tooth which required to be extracted, the pulled the tooth and said to take the boy home and he would be all right shortly. Instead of getting better, however, Ernest got far woise, and was soon confined entirely to his bed. He failed in strength and appetite, and was becoming more nervous revery day. Sometimes he would get twitching and nervous fits, and shake so hard that he would frighten you. The shaking was ost strong that the whole bed shook with him. We became alarmed and sent for a second doctor who prescribed for the boy, and who gave it as his opinion that his recovery was impossible. At this time Ernet by lessening the nervous agitation. The second the the case was getting so bad, every day becoming more hopeless, that a third was sent for carrill. This hast one said that there was no chance for poor Ernest, and that all the trouble seemed to be in the nerves. I need not tell you how grieved we felt lever the prospect of losing our boy, and would have tried anything to save his life. We had been reading in the Post about the wonderful cures made by Dr. Williams' Holding and should be avoided. The public are also cautions whose makers hope to represent the case would have tried anything to save his life. Williams' Pink Pills report the best results. The remedy is certainly a wonderful one."
When Mr. A. Turner was questioned he said the sale of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was a surprise to himself. In his experience as a druggist no remedy had made such a reputation or produced such wonderful results. Scarcely a day passed that he did not hear of parties who were benefited by the use of Pink Pills.

Mr. J. R. Dodde was a work of the best results.

Pink Pills.

Mr. J. R. Dodds was equally enthusiastic.

"If you call Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a patent medicine," said he, "they are the most popular and best selling patent medicine in my store to-day. The sale is undoubtedly on the increase, and I can say that scores who have bought from me are loud in their praises of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for them. They are certainly a great remedy, and my experience is that they effect all that is claimed for them.
