heavens in the region of the planet called "Boorpion." Each night she draws a map on which the positions and magnitude of the stars are indicated. During her years of early study Miss O'Halloran has been most successful in locating new stars which were never known before. She had many serious difficulties in her path, but she got there all the same. She has a salary of $2,500. She supplements that income by writing astronomical articles to the 'Scientific American' of New York city, and the astronomical magazine published in San Francisc. All Irishmen ought to be proud of this talented daughter of their race.

Are you seeking a Catholic ruler? Look at Cardinal McCloskey. He santry, which he is wont to tell in a times displayed by the Irish pessantry, which he is wont to tell in a most enthusiastic and inimitable manner.

Mr. J. A. Barratt has wielded the rod of discipline in our school during the past year, and has proven his flock offended public sentiment and appealed to a jury of his peers that income by writing astronomical against the suspension threatened by the ordinary. The Cardinal took him at his word, appointed two jurors, or, it may be, assessors, and invited him to name the other two; these with I believe the vicar-general to be proud of this talented daughter of these with I believe the vicar-general forms of the proof of the person of th animal from which they draw their supply looks healthy or the reverse. But then the average Egyptian is not the slave of the British urban superstition which demands that milk should look thick and yellow in order to be genuine. It is all in vain to assure most people in Eaglish towns that pure milk is not of a rich yellow hue, and that as a matter of fact it ought to be white. They know better than the cow and the milkmaid combined, and as the milkmaid combined to the reverse.

Let me cite a few examples from the season of the year, Rvery—the total conduct the season of the year, Rvery—the total conduct the season of the year, Rvery—the total conduct the year pour look—from the gently rising hills to the fertile valleys; from the sparkling rills to the fertile valleys; from the spa
