Her Day In Busiess

(By Margaret McM. Hughes.)

He kissed Bimpkins, then, in the foolish way of fathers, tossed him high in the air, but not word of protest came from the mother's lips. He carried the boy inside, Hilda following through the cool, sweet room with their vases filled with June flowers. What a pleasing contrast it was to the tired man after a day spent in a hot, stuffy office. He had been a brute to accuse his wife of extravagance when it produced results like this. But that was hours, ages -before his life had fallen into ways of pleasantness. He would not have to worry over a little ammock, or whatever you hoose to call it. So he grew plumper and greener all the time -eating and sleeping, and sleepng and eating.

But one day he grew sleepier nan ever before, and the first ing he knew he was making a ice little silken sleeping-bag for imself, spinning and spinning, nicely, as if he had taken pinning lessons all his life!

He spun so fast and so hat soon his sleeping-bag was finished. It clung safely to a wig. Then he stretched himself and went to sleep, snug as a bug

It was well that he had made imself such a nice warm coverng, for soon afterward it grew cold: oh, so cold! The wind blew, and the snow fell deep. If the little Green Worm had made that sleeping-bag, he would surely have had a very hard time But being so warm, he slept very oundly; and, sleeping so soundly e never knew one thing about the snow or the wind or the biter cold, as he rocked to and fro,

Finally the snow melted, the trees began to grow green, and the merry sunshine crept right inside the little Green Worm's sleeping-bag, to tell him that spring has come.

Then he awoke. He stretched He yawned. "I must get up. I'm hungry, o get up, just as he used to do

But he found that he was fasten ed tightly in his sleeping-bag! "Dear me!" he said to himself This was a very nice thing to stay inside of, but not so nice to et out of! But I must do it!

Then how he stretched and ashed. Oh. how hard he did ry! Sometimes he was almost scouraged; and often he had to top and rest. But he kept on bravely. It made his heart go thumpety-thump, and his breath very hard. But he

Then he spread his wings carefully, a little at a time, so as not to tear them, though it was hard to be patient, and do it slowly enough. But presently they were all ready. And then away he went through the sunny air to the waiting flowers!

"Oh, how glad I am," he whispered to himself, "that I did not get discouraged and give up trying to get out?" Minnie Leona Upton, in S. S.

TO MAKE GOOD BREAD

You must have Good Yeast

GOOD BREAD is, without question, the most important article of food in the catalog of man's diet; surely, it is the "staff of life." Good bread is obtainable only by using the Best Yeast, the best flour, and adopting the best method of combining the two. Compressed Yeast is in all respects the best commercial Yeast yet discovered, and Fleischmann's Yeast is indisputably the most successful and best leaven known to the world. It is uniform in quality and strength. It saves time and labor, and relieves the housewife of the vexation and worriment she secessarily suffers from the use of an inferior or unreliable leaven. It is, moreover, a fact that with the use of Fleischmann's Yeast, more loaves of bread of the same weight can be produced from a gven quantity of flour than can be produced with the use of any other kind of Yeast. This si explained by the more thorough fermentation and expansion which the minute particles of flour undergo, thereby increasing the size of the mass and at the same time adding to the nutritive properties of the bread. This fact may be clearly and easily demonstrated by any who doubt that there is economy in using Fleischmann's Yeast.

If you have never used this Yeast give it a trial. Ask your Grocer for a "Fleischmann" Recipe.
