During these few days, which have passed so agreeably, I could not bu note the splendid harmony and union existing among the various classes which form the population of this Island. Saturday's mail, of the fearful death which overtook him at Northern Ontario. He worked at the Porcupine in the West Dome mine, and shortly after going to Porcupine secured a claim which his friends believe is of considerable value. A friend of his named McCourt, of Antigonish, who worked with him for 13 years near Butte City, went with him to Cobalt and thence to Porcupine, so that it was he who furnished the friends of the deceased with particulars as to his death. McCourt with others took refuge in the waters of a lake and thereby saved themselves, but poor Wall with 40 other miners under the direction of an experienced old miner named Weiss went into the shaft of the West Dome Mine and none of them emerged from from it alive. They were all either suffocated or burned when the smoke and fire rushed down the shafe or killed by the terrific explosion which occurred there. Mr. Wall's body, however, was not disfigured, and | tically unanimous that the Morroccan his corpse was found at the bottom of a shaft with several other fellow miners.
