PRINCE BISMARCK died 1898, aged 82. Educated at the University of Göttingen, he there distinguished himself chiefly in physical exercises and in fighting successfully twenty-seven duels. He entered public life in 1846. His anti-democratic spirit had declared itself from the first and he rode rough-shod over the opposition of Austria was carried out in 1866 and at the end of the Franco-Prussian war (1870) he was raised to the rank of Prince. Though imperious in character and sometimes unscrupulous, he was cast in a large mould, and as the chief creator of modern Germany he will hold a conspicuous place in history.

Notes and Comments.

We are glad to find Judge Knight determined to put down attacks on the police with a strong hand. The lot of the policeman at the best is not a happy one. The Court however can afford them the protection which follows exemplary punishment of brutal attacks on them in the course of their duty.

The events of yesterday went off with much eclat. Fine weather favoured the garden parties, picnics and the L. O. A. demonstration, the latter of which was of a most imposing character. At night the Southside Hill was lit up by a great bonfire and the city resounded again and again by the reports of the firing party stationed near by the bonfire. Good temper and good feeling marked the whole of yesterday's events.

The news from Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, is the best we have heard for many a day. The allies who fought Turkey and have for some weeks past been butchering one another in a quarrel over the spoils, have agreed upon an armistice for 5 days for a peace conference. The main result of this falling out among the allies has been to afford Turkey an opportunity of recovering much of the territory Bulgaria won from her in Thrace, and to enable her to take possession of Adrianople and to tear up the Treaty of London almost before the ink of it was dry.

Cathedral and St. Michael's Picnic.

The Cathedral and St. Michael's Sunday School picnic took place yesterday at Hafey's farm, off Pennywell Road. The day being so fine made the children, an unusually large number, enjoy themselves thoroughly. During the day various sorts of games were indulged in and all entered into the fun with much zest. A number of visitors attended, including Mrs. Davidson and two children, Mrs. A. W. Harvey, Hon. J. and Mrs. Harvey, Sir W. H. Horwood, Lady Horwood, Rev. Canon and Mrs. Bolt and Rev. E. Clench, Rev. Canon White, Rector of the Cathedral, and Rev. A. G. C. Stamp together with teachers and assistants helped in no small degree to make the day successful.

Better Labrador News.

Yesterday some better Labrador news reached the Reid Nid. Co. from Capt. J. Kneeb of the Invermore. It is an improvement on last report and reads as follows: "Wind W.N.W., fresh breeze, fine and clear. Arrived at Macovic this a.m. Sign of fish at Sheep Cove. At Raad Islands nothing being done. Floaters and settlers doing a little at Indian Hr., Smokey and Cutthroat. At White Bears there is a good sign of fish with jiggers, but ice prevents the using of traps. At Macovic there is a good sign and Dunn's take from 40 to 70 quintals each haul. It looks as if few of the floaters have got beyond Macovic yet."

Abolish Dirty, Political Correspondence.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Knowing that your always independent paper is open to discuss any legitimate phase of current Newfoundland politics, permit me to avail of your always popular columns to make a few remarks on the down-grade tendency of our local political correspondence, especially as pointed and published in an election year such as this. No intelligent foreigner or resident either will ever find fault with a legitimate discussion of our local politics, but when it enters the stage of illegitimacy then the political tone of correspondences falls below par; it becomes intemperate and frequently irreparable. To say that ordinary good manners are forgotten by many Newfoundland political vote-getters (?) who write for the political press would be to put it extremely mild. Now, all this low political tone of contribution to the political press is discredit to the country abroad, whether in England or U. S. Any travelled Newfoundland will say that he hides the Newfoundland papers that he gets in election year. And yet, Mr. Editor, the editorial comment of you and your colleagues are, if you will permit me to say, rather above than below a high standard of literary worth. Where then is the fault? Is it in public opinion? Do these low political effusions that smear our political press in election year like a daub of tar, do these effusions really betoken an illiterate public? We do not admit that and yet Canadian or American and others often accuse Newfoundlanders of being illiterate because there are so many such political scribbles who have no sense of judgment or common decency in their anonymous contributions to the local press. Three-fourths of these ridiculous contributions should be relegated to the gutter they belong to. Why, Mr. Editor, as you know very well, possibly by experience, anyhow by observation, a public man can scarcely stand on either side of the political line in Newfoundland but it presently becomes the correct thing for some scribbler to proceed to get on his trail, and generally speaking to attack him, and all for what? Oftentimes for the mere prospect of some job and thus when that is not forthcoming the scribbler takes another tack and proceeds to bark on the other side of his mouth. But what's the remedy? Without detaching to political editors in their own business, it is simple truth to state, Mr. Editor, that the present tone of political correspondence admitted to our local press is an insult to the higher intelligence of the country and gives foreigners a false idea of Newfoundland. Remedy: consign to the waste basket precisely three-fourths of it sent in from the districts in election year, and then fail to print the other fourth if the contributors are too yellow livered to sign their names; or so insignificant that their names, or assumed names, would make the paper ridiculous.

Yours truly, LIBERAL.

Spanish Fever
Cause of Death

James Spearns Died in His Brother's Arms.
From Mr. Michael Spearns, who arrived to-day by the Florizel, we hear how his brother James Spearns met his death abroad recently. Both young men were amongst a contingent that left here a year and a half ago to go mining in Trinidad. From there they moved to a Spanish village to work. Deceased, James Spearns, contracted a contagious fever that was prevalent in May last. There was no doctor or clergyman to be had in the village. An effort was then made by his brother to get him to Trinidad but this proved unavailing, as the patient was too weak and began to sink gradually. After sailing for four weeks he died peacefully in the arms of his brother Michael, who is heart-broken over the affair. Deceased was well known in St. John's East, and a splendid specimen of manhood. His father predeceased him a year ago. The sympathy of the community will be extended to the bereaved family.

Degradation of Traitor

Vienna, July 18.—A telegram from Bucharest describes the scene at the public degradation of a Roumanian officer, Captain Goliescu, who was condemned to twenty years' hard labor yesterday for betraying military secrets.
The degradation took place in the square in front of the War Ministry. General Socek read the sentence, a band played a funeral march, and a private soldier approached the captain saying, "Thou art unworthy to bear an officer's badge," and tore off his epaulettes. The captain was then taken to prison amid cries of "Shame!" from the men of his regiment.

They were talking about that terrible cry, "Man overboard!"
"Only those who have been roused from midnight slumber on board ship can comprehend its meaning," said the traveller. "The sudden alarm, the fear and horror—"
"Oh, yes, they can," replied a very little shoemaker, who had no reputation as a traveller. "I heard it once when I wasn't on a ship, and I realised the horror of it more than anyone else."

"You couldn't," said the great traveller, scornfully. And the assembled company sided with him to a man.
"But I could," persisted the cobbler. "You see, I was the man who fell overboard."

McMurdo's Store News.

Thursday, July 31, 1913.
McMurdo's Saline makes a splendid cooling drink, especially during the hot weather, when a teaspoonful in a tumbler of water (to which a little sugar or lemon syrup has been added) makes a very pleasant and refreshing drink in cases of heat rash or slight fever, while a larger dose taken in the same way forms a mild but efficient laxative. A bottle of it may well form part of the equipment of the tourist or holiday seeker, as it is excellent for settling the stomach in cases of seasickness or nausea. Price 40c.
Have you used Cornsilk for that obstinate corn? No? Then try it at once, is our advice. The result will amply repay you. Price 10c. a pkg.

Yacht Detained.

The Deputy Minister of Customs, Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, has received this message:—"Steamship Nacht Y. Ddraig Loch, of Swansea, Captain Dargel, Gofrey H. Williams, owner, arrived at Hare Bay from Halifax on July 8th and from there went to Bay d'Espoir and failed to report to our Customs Officer in Newfoundland. She is detained by Inspector O'Reilly for not reporting and for fishing inside certain limits with a triple net for cod and sea trout."
