Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fugate

The Ways of Destiny

Marian Winthrop, having bidden Chalonier good night at the entrance to her hotel, faced a night of mental struggle. It proved to be the sternest ordeal that had ever confronted her. Chalonier's declaration of love had hit her with staggering force, such as none of the many similar pronouncements she had listened to in her day had ever carried. Here was a man and here was a manifesto that were not to be trifled with, laughed off, or tossed lightly into the discard of indefinite postponement. Chalonier's proposition demanded a definite answer. It embodied a bench order from the high court of Cupid that had to be acted upon. But how?

Marian had sworn that she would never marry again. Her earlier venture upon the matrimonial quicksands had sickened her soul with the whole institution of married life. Yet her unsettled life since pulling herself out of matrimony by the roots had at times well nigh worn and corroded her resolution thin and frail. Her struggles to find herself had netted her a host of defects and not only the most temporary and impermanent victories. Nothing was more horrible and untenable to her than this bleak thought of drifting on and on, getting older and less attractive, seeing youth and opportunities melt away under the blows of the hurrying hours.

Her quasi success at writing, on which she had banked so strongly, she knew now to have been a slim and snarling thread, born of deception, and incapable of rescuing her from the waves of hostile circumstances, and pulling her up on the rocks of safety from want. In response to her frantic telegram, the editor of the Cliff Dweller had wired her a confirmation of her fears. The gossiping women on the veranda of the hotel had been right. She had been tricked into becoming an object of philanthropy. She loathed and despised herself for it; she could not forgive Meadows for his conduct, even though she knew it had been well meant.

And now what? Tossing and fretting amid a dark roomful of black misgivings, Marian tried to review the details of her association with Chalonier, and to give rational thought to his sudden declaration of love and proposal of marriage. Had she been able to see light ahead, her decision would have been quick—and negative. Had she been able to see her way clear to earn a decent living, she would have stuck with tenacity to her original resolution never even to consider marriage again.

Things shape themselves with an uncanny disregard for human desires, plans, resolutions, and policies. Impleachable events almost invariably determine human directions and destinies. Decisions are forced upon the wavering, unsettled, undecided minds. The winds of circumstances blow up and fill the flapping sails of becalmed human crafts.

And Marian Winthrop did not foresee that her mind was to be made up by events on the threshold of which she was standing.

To-morrow—The Siren Song of Feminism.

Fall Novels.

Jack London writes, pen dipped in gore, of scraps aboard the "Elsinore." The "Elsinore" is there on deck, with a catiff climbing on his neck, and deeks and bulwarks are awash with forty kinds of blood, 'gosh, Oh, Jack, your elbow's getting tired; one cannot always be inspired!" "The Auction Block," by Rex E. Beach, is more than just a scream—a scorch. Rex here forsakes the Arctic strand, the snowy pass and frozen land, and takes our social scheme apart, and shows it has no brain or heart; he writes of soaks and libertines, and sports who live in their machines, and draws a truly frightful sketch of maid for sale to wealthy wretch. And ever as we read we think, "This book is surely on the blink, and when our reading it has ceased, we'll taste it for six months at least. Oh, Rex can write such corking tales of heroes lost in Arctic gales, of great things done by rugged men—why does he prostitute his pen, and write this twaddle, rank and raw? There surely ought to be a law." Alas, how far a man must look before he'll find a first class book!

Many of the new laces are embroidered with gold and colored threads.

The German War Machine.

Kaiser Wilhelm's apparent faith in the strength of Germany's battle arm in the contest with three mighty nations, is in no small degree founded upon the wonderful German military system, the like of which the world has never seen before.

On January 1st of the year of his twentieth birthday every male German citizen must report to the military head of his district. If not excused because of some physical defect he serves two years in the infantry or three years in the cavalry or artillery. For his services he receives a small compensation, hardly more than pocket money. Then he is transferred to the first reserve, which requires that he serve a month or two each year for a period of five years. The next five years are served in the Landwehr, and he is required to drill at the order of the military authorities. From the first class of the Landwehr the German soldier graduates into the second class, where he remains until he is thirty-nine. At that age he becomes a part of the Landsturm, to be called out only in the event of great national need. At the age of forty-five his military service ends.

The German standing army consists of about 600,000 men, and the first reserve about 1,500,000. The Landwehr totals 2,200,000, and the Landsturm brings the grand total to more than 6,000,000.

The s.s. Tabasco is due this evening from Halifax.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Bper War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Walldgrove, N. S., no one is better known than Sgt. Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sgt. Major writes: "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sgt. Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bull beef, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Cattanach Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

May Bring Charge of High Treason Against Captain.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—A charge of high treason may be lodged against the captain of the British ship Lowther Range, brought into Esquimaut by the cruiser Rainbow and suspected of selling coal to German warships on the Pacific.

The Naval Service Department was notified to-day of the seizure and a prize court will be held at Victoria. The ship and cargo may both be confiscated, as well as the captain being prosecuted.

The ship took on a cargo of coal at Rockhampton, an American Atlantic port, and sailed around the Atlantic through the Straits of Magellan, ostensibly bound for Australia. She was found by a British cruiser off California, and the captain was unable to account satisfactorily for his actions and how the coal cargo was much smaller than shown by the ship's papers.

A prize crew was placed on the ship, which was brought north and handed to the Rainbow, and is now detained at Victoria, pending investigation.

Fishery Reports.

From W. Paul (Great Burin to Port aux Bras).—The total catch is 34,640 qts., and for last week 3055. The 50 dories and skiffs fishing, got 200 qts. 20 boats 200, and 8 bankers, 2,655. Prospects are very poor owing to the want of bait and stormy weather hindering operations. Squid is scarce and no herring is obtainable. The voyage for the banking fleet is practically over and the vessels are all returning from the last trip.

The Listener.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slawsh."

As another political campaign draws to a thunderous and slightly frost-bitten close, it is fitting that we should withdraw our attention for a few brief minutes from the silver-tongued and leather-lunged orator and consider the heroism of the listener.

The listener never gets any press notices. He never reaps the rewards of victory after a hard campaign, and he never by any chance is embalmied in fame to be mentioned by admiring schoolboys a hundred years hence. Yet where would the orator be if it were not for the listener? Where would our whirlwind campaigns be if it were not for the patient, silent man who sits down on a hard bench in a draft night after night and allows himself to be talked at by squads and regiments of speakers?

If the listener should decline to come out, oratory would suffer a great decline and a political campaign would resemble a ward caucus of Egyptian mummies in an African desert.

The listener is a man of great heroism. Almost any man can go to war and face the bullets of an enraged enemy, but it takes a man of iron nerve to sit for two hours while a few inexperienced orators are clanking for adjectives and then to applaud heartily when the speaker of the evening comes forward with about ninety minutes of pandemonium carefully concealed in his larynx. There are men who have listened to a hundred political speeches in a single campaign, and yet we do not give these men medals. We do not even give them pensions when they die.

The listeners of America should rise as one man and demand their rights. When a man has listened to fifty speeches, he should be entitled to a county office. When he has listened to one hundred speeches, he should be sent to congress. When he has absorbed a thousand speeches and has sustained rheumatism, chilblains and a frost-bitten ear while soaking in patriotic doctrine, he should be eligible to the presidency. There is no reason why we should elect a man to public office for making the same speech a thousand times while we have among us patriots who have listened to a thousand different avalanches of wisdom and may possibly have accumulated an idea from each speech.

CIVIC MEETING.—The regular weekly meeting of the Civic Commission will be held this evening at 8.30.

"Drags the Gypsy"

"The Head Hunters" is a two reel war picture, one of the good kind that the Bison Biograph Company are noted for producing. It has plenty of life and vivacity and excellent scenic effects.

The comedy portion is sustained by two very clever comedies. "The Smuggled Laces" and "Will Power," the battle for mastery of will power between father and daughter is a very amusing picture, and one the Crescent patrons will enjoy.

The song chosen by the popular tenor, Mr. Knight, for to-night is "Sit Down You're Rocking the Boat." The usual extra picture at the Saturday matinee.

"There's a Reason" why more and more people quit tea and coffee and use POSTUM

Once convinced that tea and coffee are actually harmful to health, few parents would give tea or coffee to their children, or drink it themselves.

What proof more convincing than the unnatural aches and pains that many tea and coffee drinkers suffer?

What proof more conclusive than the scores of expert medical and scientific opinions against tea and coffee?

Brain, Stomach, Heart, Liver and Kidneys are the first organs to be affected. Sometimes it shows in headache; often in nervousness, indigestion or heart disturbance; frequently in biliousness or disturbed vision.

If you are in doubt, try this test—

Stop both tea and coffee ten days and use POSTUM

This pure food-drink made of prime wheat and a small per cent of wholesome molasses, has a delightful, snappy flavour and is absolutely pure and free from the tea-and-coffee-drug, caffeine, or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—needs no boiling. A teaspoonful of the soluble powder stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins. Grocers everywhere sell both kinds, and the cost per cup is about the same.
