The Stylish Face.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Styles in clothes are foolish things. When you come down to it they are really nothing but the yearning of the merchant to get a clever enough put on their wares so that we won't be satisfied to wear them until they wear out. Just think of the reduction in the cost of living if there were no such thing as style and women were satisfied to wear a garment so long as it was comfortable and in good condition.

Think of the narrow skirts that we put into the discard two years ago, not because they were worn out or shabby or not as becoming as when they were bought, but because they were branded 1914.

Styles Change Faster Every Year.

Of course, there have always been styles and changes of style, but the way the pace has been accelerated in the last few years is alarming. Once upon a time a style used to last two or three years. Now they change every year. Nay, more. Haven't you heard the saleswoman say, "I think you'll like this better than that; this is a model we just got in, and that was one of the early fall models."

But I did not come here to rave against clothes styles. I know the futility of it. As we approach the millennium we may also approach an ideal in this respect. Beauty and becomingness and durability may outdistance style as the criterion of clothes selection. But for the present I suppose even you and I, who do enough thinking to realize the folly of it all, will put our thoughts aside when it comes to action and join the rush to get the latest model.

What I Mind Is The Stylish Face. But what I do want to protest against is styles in faces. Do you know what I mean? Let me sketch the face that is in style nowadays and see if you don't recognize it.

Can't You See This With Your Eyes Shut?

The hair is strained back from the forehead and brought down in front of the ears, in some kind of little dandodoodle. The skin is clear but unnaturally white. What little expression there is, is probably one of boredom or superciliousness; the features are heavily regular, one eye (or both) is usually hidden by the line of the hat.

In the country or small towns you will not notice this face so often, but pass down the streets of a big city and you will see it again and again.

How do they do it?

I don't know. I suppose the style mania has entered their hearts, and dominated their whole personality so strongly, that it even impresses itself upon the face.

Wonderful, isn't it? But not pleasantly so. At least not to my thinking.

Honor Jutland Heroes.

Many stories of inspiring courage, wonderful coolness, and unflinching resource are related by Sir John Jellicoe and his commanders in despatches recommending officers and men participating in the Jutland naval battle for promotion and honors. The following are examples:

A petty officer whose leg was shot away insisted on remaining at his post and tried to get his gun into action again.

A chaplain, aged fifty-six, although himself severely burned, carried wounded men from the battery deck to the distributing station.

One surgeon amputated a limb single-handed in the dark; another severely wounded, had to be compulsorily placed on the sick list; another worked on a deck flooded with a foot of water; another worked for forty hours without rest.

"Several officers and men performed gallant deeds in scalding steam and suffocating fumes. One officer remained at work until swelling from burns closed his eyes and his hands were useless.

A stoker rendered valuable service by closing valves in a compartment in which there was five feet of water.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

THE OLD SLOGAN.

The frosty breezes have emerged from lands where snow is dropping, and pretty soon we will be urged to do our early shopping. Thus speed the busy months away, by hopes and fears attended; 'twas early springtime now the Fall's near ended. But yesterday the fields were green, and bugs and birds were cheery; to-day we're burning gasoline across a landscape dreary. The old time slogan makes me sad—but never sour or surly—when all the merchants in the grad cry, "Do your shopping early!" For it reminds me of the fact that life is swiftly flying; Time has no pity and no tact; he wants to see us dying. 'Tis but an hour since Groundhog Day, when we were blithely skating, or when we blew our coin away, the Fourth celebrating! 'Tis but an hour, and now we hear the Stentor loud and burly, who roars—and jars the atmosphere—"Please do your shopping early!" Well, such is life, and men and dames, and maids with tresses curly, will brace themselves against their hames, and do their shopping early.
