Golden Rule has Place in Trade

Has Been Found to be Good Business Policy Both for Buyer and Seller—Obligation Not One-sided—The Consumer Gains as Much by Being Fair With the Merchant as the Merchant Does by Being Square and Honest.

(Copyright)

Some cynical persons have remarked that the Golden Rule has no place in business. They have taken the position that instead of doing unto others as you would have them do unto you, the only sane plan is to do others before they have a chance to do you.

Fortunately for business and for the world at large, however, these persons are few and far between. The great majority of people are honest.

It has been proven repeatedly that even in business it pays to practice the Golden Rule, just as it has been proven repeatedly that "honesty is the best policy." It not only makes a man feel better down in his heart when he employs the principle of the Golden Rule, but he finds that it is good business. This applies not only to the man who stands behind the counter and gives a full pound of sugar to the man who asks for a pound, but also the man who stands on the other side of the counter and pays his money for the pound of sugar.

Does Consumer Pay His Part?

The consumer expects the merchant to be honest and square and give him his money's worth for every penny that he spends with him; but how often does the consumer stop and ask himself the question: "Am I being as fair and honest with the merchant as he is being with me?" The consumer not only expects the merchant to give him honest weight and full measure at the lowest possible price, but he expects a world of other things at the same time. Nine times out of ten he expects the merchant to give him credit, and nine times out of ten the merchant does it. Many times he expects the merchant to "carry" him for three or four months before he pays for what he buys, and as many times the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to pay for advertising space in the church program which he is getting up, and the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to "kick in" most liberally when he is raising a fund for the benefit of the town and the merchant does it.

He expects the merchant to provide the bonus which is to be paid to obtain a new factory which will benefit the workman, the clerk and everybody else in town, and the merchant does it. He expects the merchant to "come across" with a donation to help the poor family which otherwise would become a charge upon the common funds of the community, and the merchant does it.

Now, look on the other side of the picture. Mr. Consumer decides that he needs a new suit of clothes, or Mrs. Consumer decides that she wants a new kitchen range, or some of the little Consumers express a desire for a train of cars or a bobbed. Mr. Consumer picks up the big mail-order catalogue which the mail-order house has printed with his money and he looks at it and he looks at it over until he finds a picture that strikes his eye. It's a picture of a "nifty" looking suit of clothes. Of course, he can't feel the picture to see whether the cloth is as good as it looks; he can't look the mail-order man in the eye and ask him whether he will guarantee it to wear for at least a month or six weeks; he can't tell the mail-order man that he will drop in the first of the month and settle for it; he can't tell the mail-order man that he would like to have a little of his business or a little carpenter work or painting or plumbing work for him, as long as he is buying his goods from him, for the mail-order man hasn't any business or any work to give him. But the picture is a pretty one, so Mr. Consumer dips out his hard-earned cash, goes down to the post office, buys a money order and sends it to the mail-order man.

After a week or ten days, or possibly two weeks, the suit arrives. It may be nothing like the picture. The cloth may be of poor quality. The chances are that it doesn't fit at all. But there is nothing for Mr. Consumer to do but to put the suit on and wear it. He can't get his money back. He might send the suit back and the mail-order man might send another in its place, but the chances are that it wouldn't be any better than the first and Mr. Consumer would only be out the additional express charges.

Found Golden Rule Pays

Mr. Consumer found that it pays to remember the Golden Rule in business. If he had done unto the merchant as he would like the merchant to do unto him, he would have got more for his money and he would have aided in making it possible for the merchant to help him and his town when they needed help.

The world has discovered that the Golden Rule is not for use only on Sundays, but that it is valuable on every day of the week.

some of the sorts which do not keep well much after midwinter may be used first. Among such are Rhode Island Greening, Baldwin, Wagener and Esopus Spitzenburg. For late winter and spring, in addition to Northern Spy, varieties which are usually available are Golden Russet, Roxbury Russet or Nonpareil, Stark and Ben Davis and, in boxes from the West, Yellow Newton, Winesap, Stark and Ben Davis are the least desirable for dessert purposes, and Stark is not acid enough for the best cooking. There are other good varieties.

TO REVOLUTIONIZE ONTARIO DAIRYING

"The manufacture of condensed and powdered milks utilize 'all' of the milk solids as human food, whereas cheese and butter manufacturers are able to convert but one-half to one-third of these solids directly into food for human consumption. Because of this fact the condenseries and milk powder factories are able to pay higher prices for milk than can factories which make cheese and butter in the ordinary way—and still have a large margin of profit—how large, no one outside these concerns is aware," says Prof. H. H. Dean, of the O.A.C., in his introduction to the latest bulletin on cheese and butter making, prepared by the staff of the dairy school at Guelph. He points out that we are facing conditions that will practically revolutionize dairying in Ontario during the next ten years, and advises dairymen to make preparations to meet these new conditions as rapidly as possible.

"Our agricultural colleges and experimental stations should be leaders in these progressive and more remunerative lines of dairy advancement," he adds, and points to the great interest displayed at present in the manufacture of butter from whey, and the outcry against the waste of skim milk and buttermilk even for feeding animals, as signs of the new movement in the direction of securing the fullest returns from the milk, which is doubtless one of the most important sources of food supply existing.

THE BREAD TUNNEL

There is certainly more tragedy than comedy in the cruel disappointment of unhappy prisoners thwarted in a promising and almost successful effort to escape; nevertheless, the gallant gaiety that has marked so many of the Allied fighting men does not fail them wholly in such circumstances. Lance-Corp. Chas. W. Baker, who recently recounted his prison experiences in the Metropolitan Magazine, wastes no pathos on himself or on his fellow sufferers when they failed to get away through their ingenious tunnel and can even see a funny side to the affair.

Some of the other prisoners had begun the tunnel and had worked upon it daily for a month before they let him into the secret, which finally became known to hundreds of the captives.

It opened at the last hut at the end of the back row and was headed for the only clump of bushes anywhere near the camp. The soil was so sandy that it was impossible to make a tunnel in the ordinary way a long time passed before the boys hit upon a plan. After our own packages had begun to come and we had white bread to eat, says the corporal some genius had a happy thought of using the war bread for bricks. The war bread is as tough and as hard as rubber and of about the same size and shape of a small stone block that you use for paving streets. We kept the bread buried until night. Then we piled it up in a kind of grate, and when the sentries were out of sight we rushed it over to the tunnel. It was the most beautiful tunnel you ever saw. The sides were built up like brick walls, and the roof was a perfect arch. The sand that we took out was the same color as the sand of the camp, and as the ground was almost always wet you couldn't tell the difference. We would take it out in small tinfuls and scatter it all over the place, and with several thousand men walking round there was no way of detecting it.

Of course it was hard work making the tunnel, for we had to accumulate war bread, and so to amuse ourselves we fixed it all up. We stuck pictures from newspapers on the wall and we even ran a wire down from the cookhouse and lighted it all up with electricity. We took some of the lamps, and when the guard wanted to know where they were we said they had got broken. A hundred and twenty yards had been built out of the hundred and fifty that the tunnel had to go when a miserable Frenchman to carry favor with his captors, betrayed the secret. The other French prisoners concerned were wild with rage and shame; and when the whole camp was lined up for investigation and punishment the French non-commissioned officers stepped forward and begged "for the honor of the French army" to be allowed not only to take their own share of punishment but that of all the others.

But of course, says Corp. Baker, the British wouldn't have that, and the non-commissioned officers gave themselves up. It was a regular bowing and scraping. "You-first-my

AYLMER OFFICER AND PT. STANLEY NURSE MEET FRANCE

Saturday Times—Journal gave a letter from Nursing Sister Marion Price to her parents in Pt. Stanley, of which the following is a part:— "Yesterday I admitted Lieut. Leonard Yonell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Yonell, of Aylmer. His medical officer sent him to our hospital suffering from a very severe cold, his battery having been on the march during a very heavy rain storm. He is not seriously ill, but will, I think soon recover and join his battery. As soon as I heard the name I asked him if he were from Aylmer, Canada. He replied he was. After informing him who I was we took a great interest in one another. He is a dear little chap, and our frequent conversation about our relatives and friends at home made us firm friends. We are moving again and I regret parting with him. I divided the box of chocolates with him. They were such a treat. We enjoyed them as any sweets here are out of the question."

We feel now that the end is in sight, although it is truly terrible the awful traps the Huns have left behind which makes many casualties. To-day I had a Canadian Light Horse soldier. He told me our cavalry has been very active during October making Fritz go faster than he wanted. You cannot conceive the distress the poor civilians are suffering. After being freed from the Huns they get shelled and die. We are having strenuous times with those who escape, their nerves are shattered and so are our comrades. They tell the most awful tales of their treatment at the hands of the "vile things." One woman about 55 years of age, came to our hospital with a terribly mutilated hand and arm caused by a Hun seargeant who shot her because she cheered when she saw the Canadians coming. We are certainly in touch with all the phases and stages of the terrible ravages of the war, but we do not get depressed. It will soon be over; we feel sure that peace is in sight, and we "carry on" with that bright hope before us.

dear-Alphonse" sort of proceeding. A few of the men were given five months in solitary, but most of them got off pretty easy, because the German officers were so much amused. They thought they had taken away every conceivable thing that could be of any use for tunnel building, but they never thought of the war bread. German officers came from miles round to see the tunnel. They wouldn't let us destroy it but kept it as a curiosity. Even the general of a division near by came in to see it. He said it was the finest piece of sapping he had ever seen.

THE FINAL TEST

The "old-timers" in the Great Lakes region tell the story of a prospective marine engineer who was being examined by the captain. The captain had asked a number of difficult questions in order to confuse the man, but the candidate was always ready with an answer. At last, in a tone of deepest concern, the captain asked:

"Supposing the water in your injector was working properly, your boiler check was not stuck or your pipes clogged, but you weren't getting any water in your boilers—what would you do?"

The engineer looked puzzled for a moment, unable fully to grasp the situation; then, with a knowing smile on his face, he answered: "I'd go up on deck and see if there was any water in the lake."

"You'll do," said the captain.

WINTER APPLES AND THEIR CARE

As winter apples are expensive it is important that the buyer and consumer should, when laying in the winter's supply, obtain varieties that will be in best condition successively through the winter. He should also keep his apples so as to lose as few of them as possible from over-ripeness or rotting. As soon as the fruit is received it should be put in the coolest place available without frost. A temperature from 32 to 35 degrees Fahr. is best. If there is a choice in the house, that with the moisture atmosphere, such as a cellar without a furnace, would be the better for the air is too dry for keeping apples well in many houses.

If the apples are in good condition, they may be left in the barrel or box. If, however, they show signs of rotting they should be sorted and the unaffected specimens wrapped in tissue or newspaper which lessens the danger of rot spreading. If the room is very dry it will be better to put them back in the barrel or box after wrapping as they will shrivel less than if more exposed to the air. It is important to keep the fruit in clean receptacles, otherwise they may absorb unpleasant flavors.

Among the best variety of apples in good condition early in the winter are Fameuse or Snow, Ribstone Pippin, Hubbardston Nonsuch, Tomkins King, Jonathan, Grimes Golden and McIntosh Red are two of the most popular dessert varieties. These are both in good condition in November, but, while the Fameuse does not keep well, as a rule, much after the New Year, the McIntosh grown in some districts will keep in good condition until March. Ribstone Pippin, Hubbardston and Tomkins King are three more apples of high flavor for November and December or later. Jonathan, while not grown to any extent in Canada outside British Columbia, is shipped east in boxes. It also comes from the Western States and can be depended upon until about the New Year. It is a handsome apple of good quality. After the New Year the Northern Spy is, perhaps, the most popular apple in Canada but as the supply is limited and they can be kept until late in the winter or spring,
