The cable this afternoon brings the sad intelligence of the untimely death of Lady their London residence, Lady Rosebery contracted typhoid fever, a malady that makes constant inroads into the families o those residing in houses connected with th too-strong body, she was removed to her husband's Scottish residence at Dalmeny Park, near Edin-burgh. There it was hoped that she and her husband would be able to receive and entertain Mr. Gladstone when he visited Midlothian, as had been their custom on the occasion of previous pilgrimages by the Liberal leader. But the fever took so strong hold of the sufferer that all the plans had to be set aside, much to the regret of the hospitable couple. For weeks she has patiently suffered, sometimes recovering to a sufficient extent to give hope for a fina triumph over the disease, but her strength nas been unequal to the attack. Lady Rosebery was the daughter of Baron Meyer de Rothschild, one of the millionaire financiers who for many years have been the principal bankers of Eur have been the principal bankers of European nations. She was married to Lord Rosebery ten or twelve years since, and has proved in every sense of the word a helpmeet, as Canadians who have partaken o the distinguished nobleman's hospitality cap kestify.

A STARTLING CONTRADICTION.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

DEAR SIR,—There is an old adage that says "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and the saying is generally accepted as containing much truth. Indeed it is expanded into the generally accepted belief that true merit, whether it be that of an individual, or that of some medicinary preparation, is much more it be that of an individual, or that of some medicinary preparation, is much more likely to meet with popular approval at a distance than at home. Nasal Balm, acknowledged as being the greatest remedy for cold in the head and catarrh ever of fered the people of Canada, affords a striking instance of the fact that popular opinion, for once, at least, is wrong. From the outset its popularity in the home of its manufacture has been unbounded and constantly increasure. In evidence of this was stantly increasing. In evidence of this we offer testimonials from two Brockville gentlemen who are known throughout the Dominion.

tlemen who are known throughout the Dominion.

D. Derbyshire, Esq., Mayor of Brockville, and for the past two years president of the Ontario Creamery Association, says: "Your Nasal Balm is truly a wonderful remedy. I may say that I was afflicted with a distressing case of catarrh, accompanied by a number of its disagreeable symptoms. I had tried other remedies, but without avail, and well-nigh deepaired of a cure, when I was induced to give Nasal Balm a trial. Its effects were wonderful, and the results arising from its use surprising. Briefly stated, it stops the droppings into the throat, sweetens the breath, relieves the headaches that follow catarrh, and in fact makes one feel altogether like a new man. No one who is suffering from catarrh in any of its stages should lose a moment in giving this remedy a trial."

says: "It would be impossible to speak too extravagantly of the wonderful curative properties of Nasal Balm. I suffered for

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED BY RUDYARD KIPLING. Author of "SOLDIER'S THREE," Etc.

With the soldiers sweated and toiled the correspondents of the newspapers, and they were almost as ignorant as their companions. But it was above all things necessary that England at breakfast should be amused and thrilled and interested, whether Gordon lived or died, or half the British army went to pieces in the sands. The Soudan campaign was a picturesque one and lent itself to vivid word-painting Now and again a "Special" managed te get slain—which was not altogether a dis advantage to the paper that employed him—and more often the haud-to-hand nature of the fighting allowed of miraculous is capes which were worth telegraphing hom at eighteenpence the word. There were many correspondents with many corps and columns—from the veterans who had followed on the heels of the cavalry that occupied Cairo in $2, what time Arabi Pash called himself king, who had seen the firs miserable work round Suakin when the sentries, were cut up nightly and the scrul swarmed with spears, to youngsters jerkee into the business at the end of a telegraph wire to take the place of the betters killer or invalided.

more to take the place of the betters killer or invalided.

Among the seniors — those who knev every shift and chauge in the perplexing ar tangement, the value of the seedlest, weed iest Egyptian garron offered for sale in Cairo or Alexandria, who could talk a tole graph-clerk into amiability and soothe the ruffled vanity of a newly-appointed staff officer when press regulations became burdensome—was the man in the flame hirt, the black-browned Torpenhow. Heppresented the Central Southern Syndicate in the Campaign, as he had represented in the Egyptian war, and elsewhere. The syndicate did not concern itself greatly with criticism of attack and the like. I supplied the masses, and all it demanded was picturesqueness and abundance of detail. There was more joy in England over one soldier who insubordinately steps our of a square to rescue a comrade than over twenty generals slaving even to baldness over the gross details of transport and commissariat.

He had met at Suakim a young man, sit ting on the edge of a recently abandoned redoubt about the size of a hat-box, sketch ing a clump of shell-torn bodies on the gravel plain.

"What are you for?" said Torpenhow
The formula of the correspondent is that o

"My own hand," said the young man without looking up. "Have you any to hance?"

Torpenhow waited until the sketch wa finished, and when he had looked at it said "What's your business here?"

"Nothing. There was a row, so I came I'm supposed to be doing something down at the pointing slips among the boats, or else I'm in charge of the condenser on on of the water ships. I've forgotten which.

"You've cheek enough to build a redoul with," said Torpenhow, and took stock the new acquaintance. "Ito you alway draw like that?"

"H'm?" said Torpenhow, "can't say care for Verestchagin-and-water myself, by there's no accounting for tastes Doing any thing now, are you?"

"No. Amusing myself here."

Torpenhow looked at the aching desolt tion of the place. "Faith you've queer ut tions of amusement. Got any money?"

"Enough to go on with. Look here, yo want me to do war work?"

"I don't. My syndicate may, though Ye can draw more than a little, and I don suppose you care what you get, do you?"
