Farrar's Impeachment of Modern Luxury.

LONDON, July 3.—Archdeacon Farrar has been striking with great freedom against the rich. He bitterly complains "that while money is forthcoming in superfluous thousands for more luxuries of ostentation, it can hardly be wrung for the amelioration of human misery and the salvation of human souls." The other week, as he instanced, "thousands of pounds changed hands in the brainless excitement of betting and gambling" on the Derby; while he noted as another illustration of the poverty of the times that at an art sale $25,000 was gladly and enthusiastically given on one afternoon last week for mandarin vases, ornate clocks and marqueterie commodes. And all this munificence is being flaunted in the face of the people while money cannot be obtained for the care of the sick and the dying and the support of charitable institutions.

Gladstone in Retirement.

LONDON, July 3.—A parliamentary representative gives a very touching account of the way in which Mr. Gladstone passes the greater part of his day. He will not be allowed to read or use his eyes for another month, and he has to sit all day with his eyes closed and with dark spectacles. Meanwhile he is read to by relays of friends, who take each other's place and give Mr. Gladstone some remarkably varied samples of reading. One day, for instance, a lady friend read to the ex-Premier a novel, and she was followed by George Russell, the under-secretary for the Home Office. Mr. Russell asked Mr. Gladstone what he preferred. The ex-Premier replied: "Read me the second Æneid." Mr. Russell read 600 lines, the old man stopping him now and then for comment, or to ask the reader to pause while he himself took up the recitation with some remembered lines. It is a pathetic reminiscence, for the second Æneid has always been a great favorite with Mr. Gladstone, and he used it copiously in the far-away historic encounters with Mr. Disraeli.

The prohibition mass meeting was held here to-night, and addresses were delivered advocating prohibition by Gen. Dow and Miss Frances Willard.

Organs, music books, silver communion service were all destroyed. It was very unfortunate it happened just at present as the church would have been vacated in two months. A Canadian Wife-Deserter Nabbed. BATAVIA, N. Y., July 3.—Mrs. Emma Fridenburg came with her baby last week from Woodstock to Batavia in search of her runaway husband. She searched faithfully, but obtained no trace of him for several days. Sunday evening she spotted the deserter on the street, and in a moment met him face to face. There was no sentimentality about the meeting. It was a strict matter of business with the forsaken wife, and she immediately swore out a warrant for non-support, and her recreant spouse now lingers in jail until he can raise $300.

Cleared Up.

Light Thrown on the Identity of Henry Thomson

By Mr. Shirley, of New York—Came Over as a Bicycle Agent—A Supposed Cousin of Mr. T. R. Parker.

Mr. Amos Shirley, the New York gentleman who is looking after the affairs of the late H. H. Thomson, arrived here at an early hour this morning. His arrival clears up the mystery surrounding Thomson's identity. Mr. Shirley is not a lawyer as has been stated but is the New York agent of the New Howe bicycle manufacturing company. It appears that Thomson was a traveling agent of the same company and this is how they came to be acquainted. Mr. Shirley is an Englishman and feels the shock of Thomson's death and the attendant sad circumstances very keenly. He was seen by an ADVERTISER reporter this morning and gave the following particulars of the young man.

"Thomson called on me when he first landed in New York," said he. "He represented the same firm as I and came out equipped with $10,000 worth of bicycles and a power of attorney to do as he pleased. He impressed me very much as a remarkably able young man and I formed quite a liking to him."

"It has been said that Thomson was not what he claimed to be," said the reporter. "In justice to him it would be well to state just who he is."

"Well," answered Mr. Shirley, "all I know is that he is highly respectably connected and belongs to a wealthy family in Glasgow."

"Is it so that his father and brothers own and control a steamship line?"

"No, I don't think so. His father is dead. The firm was the late John Thomson & Son, ship brokers and insurance agents, Glasgow."

"Then Mr. Thomson was not one of the firm?"

"No; he simply represented the New Howe Company."

Mr. Shirley was told that it had been set forth as a reason for the deed that Thomson's people objected to the match.

"How could they know about it when they did not even know where he was?" asked Mr. Shirley. "Why didn't he write to his mother? Why didn't he write to his brother? Why didn't he write to the New Howe Company? Why didn't he write and tell them where he was?"

"How do you account for the deed?"

"I don't know, unless his love for the young woman rendered him temporarily insane."

"Do you think the shortness of funds had anything to do with it?"

"He could have had any money he wanted by writing for it. I can't understand why he did not write. He came to New York on April 12 and stayed a few days. He left a valise at the hotel where he was stopping in New York and said he would go to London, Ont., and return in a few days. That was the last I have seen or heard of him. His people called after that saying they did not know where he was. I could only tell them that he left in April for London, Ont. He was then well supplied with money."

"While I was in the undertaking establishment this morning I met Mr. Thos. R. Parker, C. P. R. ticket agent here, and he appeared to be a cousin of the young man. He will be buried from Mr. Parker's house this afternoon."

Mr. Shirley said further that he would wait and be present at the inquest to-morrow night and gain what additional particulars he could. Since he arrived this morning he has exhibited to Thomson's brother, telling him that it appeared to be a case of double suicide. Mr. Shirley was requested by cable to come to London and attend the obsequies, get particulars, and bring away any personal effects.

Mr. Thomas R. Parker, who appears to be a cousin of deceased, was not aware of the existing relationship until last evening. He suspected it then, and Mr. Shirley's arrival strengthened the belief and warranted the burial from Mr. Parker's house this afternoon. The burial took place at Mount Pleasant cemetery and was private.

Rev. J. W. Annis officiated. It was the wish of Mr. Shirley, the McKeechies and Mr. Parker that the funeral should be separate.

Mr. Shirley has telegraphed to H. B. Davies, Yonge street, Toronto, to attend the inquest to-morrow. Mr. Davies is acquainted with Mr. Thomson's people and in even a better position to speak of them than Mr. Shirley.

The body at the undertaker's attracted a curious crowd and very many women and girls called to see the remains.

Sir John Carling's Daughter Married. THE ADVERTISER'S Ottawa special to-day says: "The wedding of Mr. M. Vernon C. Nicholson and Miss Carling, daughter of Sir John Carling, took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's father. The groom is a brother of Lady Ritchie, a prominent official of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, a member of the Rideau Club, and well-known in social circles in the capital. After the ceremony a reception was held on the lawn adjoining the residence. Music was furnished by an orchestra, and refreshments were served underneath marquees erected for the occasion. The couple were the recipients of many handsome presents. They left for the east on their honeymoon."

A Golden Key.

"What is that which I should turn to, lighting upon days like these? Every door is barred with gold, and opens but to golden keys."

The golden key, to which those who desire to open the door of health, should turn to in days like these, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The poor man's peace can procure it. The rich man's millions can buy nothing better.

Mrs. Neal, of Crockett Mills, Tenn., had an attack of measles, which was followed by bronchitis and pneumonia. Her husband writes: "I feel gratified with the effect of your wonderful medicine. I can recommend it to anybody, and feel I am doing them justice. My wife was not able to perform her household duties for six months. She has used two bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and is now able to do all her work. I think it the finest medicine in the world, and I am gratefully, your life-long friend."

Yours sincerely, J. B. Neal.
