The Secret Out.

"'Mr. Gryce,' said she, 'I have a daughter.' 'Yes,' I returned, inwardly startled, Miss A, and dishonor seemed so wide

'She is our only child,' the mother went on. 'We love her, and have always cherished her, but though it is generally known in the houseand here the poor lady's eyes roamed about her as if she were afraid her words would be overheard, 'she has left us; gone away without acquainting us where-suddenly, in explicably, leaving only the most meager explanation hehind her, and—and—'
"'But, madam,' I interrupted, 'if she left any explanation-"Mrs. A took a small and crumpled note out of her pocket and handed it

'A letter,' she affirmed, 'sen't through the mail. And I was in the ouse when she left, and would have listened to any reasonable request she had to make.'

"I had already read the four or five lines which the letter contained. 'Dear Mother,-I must have rest. I have gone away for a few days, but will be back on the 27th. Don't worry. Your affectionate. "What is the matter? with this?" I asked. 'She says she will be back on the 27th, and today is only the 24th.' 'Sir,' was the answer, 'it is the only time in our experience when our daughter has left us without first gaining our permission. Beside, the time is especially inopportune. My daughter's wedding cards are out." Mr. Gryce stopped suddenly, for Dr. Cameron had given an anxious start. "Ah, that arouses your interest!" remarked the detective. "Your own wedding day being so near, I am not sur-

It was dryly said, and the doctor at once reseated himself. He had no wish to appear unduly moved, but he could not suppress every token of emotion, so he turned his head away from the light. Mr. Gryce let nis gaze travel to a new object before proceeding.

"This avowal of Mrs. A put a new aspect on affairs," said he, "but yet I saw no reason for the exereme anxiety displayed, 'And on what day does she expect to be married?' I asked. 'On the 27th.'

"'But she says she will be back." "That does not comfort me." "'You think she will not come?" "'I have no hope that she will."

"This acknowledgment was uttered with emphasis. There seemed to be but one conclusion to draw. "'Your daughter wishes to escape her engagement?'

"The answer was less doubtful. 'The answer was less emphatic than before. In fact, it expressed doubt. "I do not know, sir; my daughter is not herself; has not been for some time. My husband and myself have both noticed it; but we never anticipated her taking any such extreme action as this. Where has she gone? What will become of her? How can we face the world? How can we tell her lover?' "Then you think that-

"That she is laboring under a temperary aberration of mind, caused perhaps by the excitement of the last few weeks, that she is not responsible for her acts; that she may be anywhere remote or mear; and that we may wait till the hour set for her marriage is past without seeing her.'

To this I could make but one reply Then why not take her lover into your confidence, inform him of your fears, and gain the benefit of his experience in your search for her?'

'The answer will astonish you. "Because we are very proud, and he is very proud. To explain our fears, we should be obliged to say much that would be humiliating for us to utter and for him to hear. Besides, we may overrate the situation. She may come back, as she says she will, and should this be the case, you can see for yourself what endless regret would follow any such confidences as you suggest.' I began.

"'It is this note which causes our dilemma,' she interposed. 'With this before me I cannot act as if there were no hope of her returning in proper time take part in the ceremony. Yet I do not trust these lines, nor the promise she has made. Why, I can hardly say; for she has always been a woman of her word. But she is not herself, of that I am convinced.'

"This repetition of her former assertion made it easy for me to inquire what special change she had perceived in her daughter to lead to such a conclusion. She evidently found it difficult to reply.

"'I cannot put it into words,' she declared; 'I feel the change.' 'And how long have you felt it?'

'Not long, since we began active preparations for her wedding, I think.' 'And no one else has observed it?' "'I cannot say; I think her lover

" 'Because it has been in reference to him she has shown her peculiarities strongest. For weeks she has received him only on sufferance; and for the last few days has more than absolutely refused to see him.'

" 'And what reason' did she assign "'Follies. Fatigue, caprice, a letter to write, a dressmaker to see, anything that came into her head.'

" 'Certainly; her cards were out.' "The tone in which this was said

'Yet she went on preparing for the caused me to reflect. Though affable, kindly and even philanthropic in her dealings towards the world at large, Mrs. A is, as everyone knows, a woman who would find it very difficult to infringe upon any of the laws of society, Having seen her daughter pledge herself to a man of suitable pretensions, she would consider such a pledge final if only because she could not face the talk and scandal that would follow a rupture. Influenced by this idea, I

'You must be perfectly frank with me if you want me to help you at this crisis. Has your daughter, or has she not, expressed a wish to break her en-

" 'She asked me once if I thought it was too late for her to do so. Of course, there was but one reply to this, and she said no more. But,' the poor mother continued hastily, 'that was only a symptom of flightiness. She has railway train and fell off the pier. nothing against her tover, or does not pretend to have."

' 'Only against marriage?'

"'Only against marriage."
"Only against marriage."
"Mrs. A,' I now boldly asked, 'do you think that she loves the man you expect her to marry?' "The answer came hesitatingly. 'She accepted his attentions with pleasure when they were first offered.' " 'Do you think she loves any other man? The mother shrank back in dismay. I am sure she does not. How could There is not another such genshe? tleman in our circle of acquaintance.' "This was flattering to the gentleman, but not exactly satisfactory to

"'You know girls sometimes take strange whims. " 'My daughter is not a girl, sir, she is a woman.' "This silenced me, as it would you, sir, I have no doubt; and seeing the mother was really sincere in believing that her daughter's mind was temporarily affected. I inquired again as to what she had done or failed to do of late, and found that she had shunned the society of the members of her familv. as well as that of her lover, finding her sole interest seemingly in the preparation of her wardrobe. that she did attend, said Mrs. A, and it was the only thing that she did help me in. No hour was too late for her to see her dressmaker; no engagement too pressing for her to receive and flt on any of the costumes that kept coming home. Indeed, she showed more than pher's liquor store at Ingersoll. A. Hena bride's usual interest in such matters; and it is the one reason I have for not disputing you utterly when you say she may come back. She will want to see her dresses.'

"'Then she did not take them with

" 'She took nothing.' "'What! not a trunk?"

"'Nothing; that is, nothing but a little hand satchel.' 'How do you know this?'

"'We all saw her go out; she was in shopping costume.' "'But she had money?"

" 'I cannot say. Some, no doubt; but we found a large roll of bills in her drawer, and her father says it contains nearly all he had lately given her. I do not think her pocketbook held more than $5.'

"This was a point. Either the girl was going among friends, or she was really touched in her mind. To make sure that the first supposition was not true, I asked for a list of the houses which Miss A was in the habit of visiting. Mrs. A mentioned some half dozen, but added that her daughter's most intimate companion was in Europe, and for the others to go to them at this time.

"'And she positively carried no baggage with her?" "'None; I have looked over things carefully and find nothing missing. She did not even wear her diamonds.'
"'And her watch?"

"'Is left behind." "I felt troubled. I looked at the mother to ascertain what her real fears were. But they did not seem to be any worse than those she had expresed. Was she blind to the possibilities? I felt it my duty to repeat a former question.

"'Mrs. A,' said I, 'I will try and find your child. The fact that she had too little money to go far from home will facilitate matters. But first I must be sure that there is no third party mixed up in this case, and that party a gertleman. You are certain that she was not secretly interested in some unknown person?'

POISONED BY A CAT SCRATCH. New York, June 16.-Jennie Roberts, a three-year old girl living at 530 Central avenue, Kearny, N. J., will probably die from blood poisoning caused by a scratch inflicted by a pet cat. The child was playing in the yard about three weeks ago, when the big yellow cat which belonged to neighbors named Sulzman paid its usual daily visit to play with the child. She picked it up as usual and them put it down. The cat raised its paw and brought it down on the child's leg, making a long, deep scratch. The child ran into the house, where her mother administered some remedies. A fever followed, and three days later blood poisoning set in. Dr. Reid attended the little one, but she grew worse, and her death has been expected. She has lost all power in her lower limbs and cannot stand. She suffers from chills and convulsions, and has fallen away almost to a skeleton.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osecop. Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ANCHER, M. D., 111 Se. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
