BURIED ROMAN SHIP FOUND.

Part of a burned and mud-buried ancient ship has just been discovered in the harbor near Christ Church, Hampshire. At first it was considered to be a Viking vessel, but further excavations and expert criticism of the articles discovered have established the fact that the ship belonged to the Romans. A small, incense cup of graceful outline, 3 1/2 inches high and 2 1/2 inches in diameter, was sent to the British Museum authorities for examination, with the result that Mr. C. H. Read replied it was of Roman date. Altogether more than twenty articles of iron, bronze and pottery have been found.—London Chronicle.

Mr. Marks at Hamilton.
Editor J. T. Marks, of the Industrial Banner, addressed the Hamilton Educational Association on Friday night on the factory for unemployed established in this city a year ago last winter. He showed samples of toys manufactured from old tin cans and other waste material, and stated the factory could compete with the best in the city. He said the factory served a two-fold purpose: It gave employment to waste labor and it reclaimed waste material. The association had been doing educational work through the columns of the Industrial Banner and by holding meetings in the various cities in Ontario. It was trying to overcome the indifference manifested by workmen in questions which vitally affected their welfare. He said that a large proportion of workmen had been doing more or less society dead than alive. Their indifference made possible all the evils which afflict society today.

A PASTOR SURPRISED

Presentation to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay, of London Junction.

On Friday evening last one of those pleasant little surprises that bring gladness to a pastor's heart took place at the manse, London Junction, the closing meeting of the Boys' Missionary Brigade of St. George's Church, being held there. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay were at the same time presented with a beautiful group photograph of the boys, with an address expressing at once their appreciation and goodwill.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackay both testified to the unfeigned pleasure they had found in working with and for the boys, and expressed the hope that the good work done in the past would not only continue but be quite surpassed. After a while spent at lively games and dancing, refreshments were served, and the boys departed well pleased and leaving behind what will prove a happy memory.

The brigade is one of but two or three in the Presbytery of London. Its chief interest has hitherto been in the Mission Hospital at Vegreville, to which it has once and again contributed.

BISHOP PRESENTED WITH A CROZIER

Knights of Columbus Royally Remembered His Lordship on Saturday.

BISHOP'S FIRST ADDRESS

Is a K. of C. Himself and Speaks Eulogistically of the Order—A Kindly Speech From a Kindly Heart.

At St. Peter's Palace on Saturday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, Bishop Fallon was presented with a very handsome gold crozier by the local order of the Knights of Columbus. About 20 of the knights were present. The presentation ceremonies were simple in the extreme.

His lordship responded briefly in reply to the address, and thanked the local knights for their kindness and thoughtfulness. The address was not a formal one, by any means, but the expression of real, heartfelt gratitude.

The first address from the new bishop was one of affection and love for the people he will labor in the days to come, and was a happy augury indeed for the future happiness and prosperity of the diocese. Bishop Fallon is an orator in the real sense of the term, his clear enunciation conveying sincerity and absolute honesty of purpose.

The knights assembled at 4:30 o'clock, as arranged. Promptly on time, his lordship responded, and Rev. Father Aylward, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, introduced Bishop Fallon to the visitors.

A seat was offered the bishop, but he refused, saying that all would look better standing.

The Address.
Grand Knight J. O. Dromgole then read the following address:

Your Lordship—We approach you today to express the gratification, the sincerity, the warmth of feeling with which we welcome you to our midst.

"Mindful of obligations and duties of the Order of the Knights of Columbus, we hasten to pledge loyalty, reverence and devotion to you, our chief pastor, and to assure you of our ready co-operation in all that we can do in our sphere and power, which may tend to aid you in your divine mission. As an earnest of these pledges, and reflecting in a very small measure the devotion which prompts us to offer it, we ask you to accept this crozier. We beseech Almighty God to bless you, preserve you in health and length of years, that you may, under his divine guidance, accomplish to the greatest degree the task to which he has called you.

"We ask you to remember us in your prayers and at the holy sacrifice of the mass, and to the end that we may receive the necessary grace to be able to stand steadfast in the faith and the practice of our holy religion."

"On behalf of London Council, No. 1410, Knights of Columbus,"
"Signed: John O. Dromgole, grand knight; James J. Callaghan, deputy grand knight; Claude Brown, chancellor."

Mr. J. J. Callaghan made the presentation. The crozier is a magnificent one, and embellished with many jewels.

The Bishop's Reply.
"I am very, very glad that my first official visit is with the Knights of Columbus. I am sure that in the future I will make my home for the future. I was a Knight of Columbus before I was a bishop. I was a Knight of Columbus when it did not mean so much as it does now. I was a Knight of Columbus with so much favor by some bishops as at the present time, and when one had almost to fight to be a knight. Now it is a favor and a blessing."

"In my travels from one end of Canada and the United States to the other, speaking generally, for there is nothing perfect, I have found the knights to be a devoted body of Catholic laymen. While at Ottawa College, some of my very best friends were knights, and time belonged to the order. Since that time my knowledge of them has broadened. I was named first state chaplain, and was thrown in touch with the officers of the state jurisdiction, and to meet them was to love them, whether in Charlottetown or Victoria."

Bishop Bespeaks Support.
"I hope your assistance and loyal support will be given to the order, in our constant endeavor to keep aloft the high principles of faith and high standard of conduct of our order."

"When I went to Buffalo, I was met cordially by the Knights of Columbus there, and they made me go into exile much easier than it would otherwise have been. Since that time, I have done extensive travelling, and everywhere I have found them loyal Catholics, devoted to their organization and its principles, and standing straight and strong for Catholic faith and practice."

"And now coming to London, I am met by the Knights of Columbus, the cathedral city, and I am confident my stay among you will be a continuation of the blessed happiness of the past fifteen years."

A Personal Welcome.
"I take this as a personal welcome. You will find little of the official about me. Some time you may even stare and start at the apparent lack of episcopal dignity, but you will understand me when I say that I have gone through as a Knight of Columbus all that you have gone through, and that will explain all things. (Laughter.)"

"I hope you will never fail to find a friend in me. I will go to you when I want assistance and loyal support, and you will come to me when you want assistance and help. With this personal, loyal, affectionate contact, I think you again may sincerely feel this magnificent gift, so symbolic, so spiritual in significance. It will be the staff of God's grace and God's Blessing, and never the staff of unnecessary authority. I take you to be typical of the diocese over which I, though so unworthy, must rule, and I hasten to assure you that the rule of the crozier will be a rule of love and affection, and that it will not ever be a burden to you or chafe you."

Beautiful Rings.
His lordship spent several minutes conversing with the knights assembled, and showed them two rings, the episcopate ring, the gift of Mr. M. P. Davis, of Ottawa, a really magnificent ring, and another the gift of a friend in Buffalo.

He then gave his blessing to the knights and retired. Among those present were Knights J. O. Dromgole, J. Callaghan, R. H. Dignam, Phil Lewis, Dr. W. J. Tillmann, J. O'Meara, T. R. Blinnier, J. THE NEW BISHOP AND HIS FAMILY

Aged Parents of a Distinguished Son and His Brothers Meet.

The reunion of the Fallon family was one of the most interesting events in connection with the consecration of Bishop Fallon.

On Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. Fallon, and their other sons, Joseph L. Thomas, D. and Vincent, of Cornwall; Frank E., of the department of state, Ottawa; Rev. Charles Fallon, O. M. L., Tewkesbury, Mass., and Rev. J. P. Fallon, O. M. L., Ottawa College, with Mrs. J. P. Fallon, Ogdensburg; Mrs. Denham, Ottawa, and Miss Vera Fallon, granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fallon, arrived on No. 15 over the Grand Trunk from the east.

His lordship was naturally anxious to meet his aged parents, and in Mr. Phil Peacock's auto, he was taken to the station. He impatiently waited for the train, and when it came, he was surrounded by a number of clergymen, extending their congratulations. He broke through their ranks, and seeing his aged father and mother, he rushed to their arms.

He grasped his mother, and kissed her, saying, "Oh, mother!"

Tears welled up in the little old lady's eyes. The big bishop affectionately greeted his father, and the rest of the family.

He accompanied the old folks to the Sacred Heart Academy, where they were billeted, and the two priests, Father Fallon, of Tewkesbury, and Father Fallon, of Ottawa, went with him to Mount St. Joseph. The other sons registered at the Tecumseh House.

The seven boys form a striking family. They are all tall, strongly made, and athletic. No wonder their parents' faces shone with pride as they watched the seven big men walk down the station platform.

At 7:30, the bishop spent a quiet day at Mount St. Joseph and St. Peter's Cathedral. In the morning mass was celebrated at the chapel, at which the family of the bishop, and some immediate friends attended. Later in the day he was taken to the palace, where he met some old friends. Among them were Hon. R. W. Scott, former secretary of state. The greeting was very cordial, for they had been warm friends.

"I am more than pleased to see you," said the bishop. "You were always so good to me, and I owe so much to your kindness and assistance."

Darcy Scott, of the railway commission, and other prominent laymen were introduced to the bishop, and a large number of the visiting priests came to pay their respects.

There were no services in St. Peter's Cathedral in the morning, but there were no vesper, or afternoon services.

The last mass this morning was said at 7:30, the church being locked until 9 o'clock, when it was opened for the ceremonial of consecration.

MANY COME TO SEE THE CONSECRATION

Bishops, Priests and People From Every Part of the Country Are in London Today.

Hundreds of visitors are in the city today attending the consecration of Bishop Fallon in St. Peter's Cathedral. The hotel accommodation of the city is taxed to capacity, the Tecumseh House being particularly crowded with visitors. In addition practically every Catholic home in the city has a guest, and many have quite a number.

A number of prominent Canadians are among the visitors, among them being Hon. Chas. Murphy, secretary of state; Hon. R. W. Scott, formerly secretary of state; Darcy Scott, vice-chairman of the Dominion railway commission, and others of less prominence.

There is a bewildering array of clergymen in the city, including practically all the prominent archbishops and bishops of Canada, with many distinguished American divines.

The inferior clergy from the diocese have nearly all arrived. It is estimated

EARLY DAYS ON THE OLD GREAT WESTERN

Londoners Who Formed Part of the Old Brigade—An Accident Recalled.

The Hamilton Spectator publishes an interesting letter from Mr. John Patterson, caretaker of the Provincial government buildings at Winnipeg, and at one time employed on the old Great Western Railway. The letter deals with the early days on what is now the middle division of the Grand Trunk, and contains references of local interest. Among other things Mr. Patterson says:

"Although over thirty years have elapsed since I left the Great Western, I still remember others of the oldtimers. Few of them survive, doubtless, and not one of them, possibly, is still in the service. They were all well known in Hamilton, although their homes may not have been there. Some of them resided at the Falls and others at London. Among them were Dave Porcupine, Johnny Love, Billy Love and Johnny Whyte, engineers, and all from Ayrshire, and who made their homes in London. Conductors Thorpe, Delaney, Parness, Patchen (or Patching), Knill and Brodie, and Engineer Simmy Mason, who retired from the road a few years ago, and resided in London with his daughter, Mrs. Carson, wife of a Grand Trunk engineer."

"The boys of the old brigade, were they alive, could tell by the hour of the good old times they had in the early days of the Great Western, when the Elk, Rehoboth, Stag, Greyhound and others kept the pride of the locomotive department—quite a number of the engines in those days had such names as these. George Morgan was running the Elk when it went into the washout at Flamboro, Dave Porteous, I am told, was stricken with paralysis while looking his engine into a stall in the washhouse at London. One of the boys was running on the Grand Trunk out of London now, I believe, while another is an engineer on the Peter Marquette out of London. As I have said, they were all just as good as their father was."

Mr. Patterson recalls an accident which led to the appointment of Stan Sharp as mechanical superintendent at Hamilton.

"Sharp was popular. The men who most idolized him. I am sure they served me right. Sharp had been appointed to succeed a man, Brad, who was shortly afterwards killed while coming down from London on the night express. The train ploughed headlong into a washout at Flamboro. Brad was sitting next to a window, and in a moment John Wilson, locomotive foreman at London, in the wreck Brad's chest was crushed in with a heavy iron bar, or bolt. Wilson escaped unhurt, but George Morgan, of London, was the engineer of the express. He was instantly killed."

"I remember Morgan was a thrifty fellow. The day before the accident, or else that very day, he had paid off the mortgage on his house on York or King street, in London, and was very proud of what he had done. In conversation with a friend he spoke of the matter, but he added, 'If I should get killed my wife would have only $2 in the house.' On his next trip he met his death."

MARSHALL FIELDS ESTATE

Chicago, April 25.—Interesting figures of the estate left by the late Marshall Field were made known when Judge Rinkner in the county court entered a decree in the inheritance tax litigation, which has been appealed to the supreme court. The decree finds that the fair market value of the estate was $38,459,932.38. Legal deductions on account of debts, claims, trust funds and various fees, totalled $1,196,372.86. This amount included $1,000,000 paid to the widow, Mrs. Della S. Field, under an ante-nuptial contract.

This leaves the net value of the estate $37,263,559.52. Taxes on cash legacies amounting to $3,060,000 have been fully paid.

DIED OF HIS INJURIES

Mr. Daniel Deacon Passes Away at the Advanced Age of 94 Years.

Mr. Daniel Deacon, who on Thursday afternoon fell down stairs at the home of his son, J. R. Deacon, and fractured his skull, died late on Saturday afternoon without recovering consciousness.

Mr. Deacon would have been 94 years old had he lived until December, and was a man of wonderful agility and vigor. Since coming to London some years ago he had been a regular attendant at the Askin Street Methodist Church, and had attended the regular service a week ago Sunday, and was at the Epworth League meeting on Monday night, and at prayer meeting on Wednesday evening.
