His score at "The Oram Arms" was a large one, and the chalks stood up against him like files of soldiers; but Jerry ignored their existence—paying off a little now and then, and drinking more, each time increasing the army of debt against him, until one evening Mr. Richard Rewitt, the landlord of the aforesaid "Oram Arms," cried "halt."

"I've got a bit of a cold," replied the other, "and I have been shut up a good deel with business lately. Trade's been brisk; but how is it we have not seen you?"

"Well—the fact is, sir," said Jerry, rubbing his chin, "I've been busy wiping off your score."

"Work is slack," murmured Jerry, but the harvest is coming on, and then every-

"Work is slack," murmured Jerry, but the harvest is coming on, and then everybody will have their soling and heeling done, and I shall be able to pay you off.

"Perhaps so," returned Mr. Rewitt;
"but you will have as much as you can do to square off what is up there. Look at them. Those chalks are a standing disgrace to any man. You ought to be ashanded of yourself."

Jerry looked at the accusing marks, and really felt aghast at the long list against him. The inner door of the bar was a regular blackboard, and he trembled before it.

Now when Jerry first came to "The Oram Arms," the landlord was very polite and spoke as softly as you please to him. No spider, courteously entreating a fly to enter into his parlor, could have been more oily tongued or smiled a, more persuasive smile, which is just possible; but when Jerry got into the toils, and had been well confined in the web, mine host put on another face and tone.

"If you drink," he said, "you must extended for the said of that."

"Others have not got their share," said the landlord, facetiously; "but I think we could make room for you, if you look us up."

"No, thanks, sir," returned Jerry, "I've had enough of chalking on other people's doors, and now I chalk on my own."

"Yes sir, have the goodness to turn round and look behind you. There's my door half full."

"It's a wise thing to keep accounts yourself," said the landlord, who hardly knew what to make of it, "for mistakes will happen; out—"

"No mistake can happen, sir," interrupted Jerry, "for I am the only party as keeps that account."

"But when Jerry first came to "The or mistake and now I chalk on my own."

Nothing was brought for a fortnight, and the landlord congratulated himself upon not having hastily sought his absent customer, who still owed him over a pound; but the appearance of Jerry's wife with the balance had the effect of structure. "Go and see him," suggested his wife.
"I intended to do so. Here, give me our Ton's boots; they want a patch on the side, and it will be an excuse for my dropping in upon him."

"If you drink," he said, "you must expect to pay for it. My brewer would stand no nonsense from me, and I must have my money from you."

"Only one pint," pleaded poor Jerry.

"Not half a pint," replied the landlord. "Go home and work, and pay your debts like a man."

like a man."

The entrance of a customer with ready money cut short the conversation, and Jerry stood back a pace or two while the other was being served. When that was being served. When that was being served. When that was being served and the kern derale and the server of the kern derale and the server of the server of the kern derale and the server of the kern derale and the kern Jerry stood back a pace or two while the John stone was being served. other was being served. When that was done, and the beer drank and the stranger gone, Jerry made a final appeal.

"I've been a good customer to you, Mr. Rewitt. Almost every penny I've earned has come into your till. I've nigh lived on beer, if living it can be called, and my wife and children have had to shift how they could for bread."

"That's nothing to me," said the landlord.

"Let me have one pint."

"Have you the impudence to ask for it with that shameful lot of chalks staring you in the face?"

Jerry did not reply, but he took a long and earnest look at the recording files and drawing his hand across his dry mouth, hurried out of "The Oram Arms."

"Who is tbat you've been talking to, Richard?" inquired Mrs. Rewitt, entering the bar from a room behind.

"Jerry Muddler," was the reply; "I've stopped his drink until he pays up."

"Then he will go to "the Green Goose" and get his drink there," said Mrs. Rewitt.

"They won't trust him a penny," rewintless the stranger gone, Jerry and to do touch drink no more, and I wow to touch drink no more, and I wow to touch drink no more, and I would have stor, and we both joined in earnest prayer that I might have strength to keep my vow. The next morning I went over to George Stevens and asked him how I could go about signing the pledge. He helped me like a man—and it was done."

With his eyes wandering to and fro between Jerry and the chalks upon the door, the amazed landlord remained silent. Jerry went on:

"My wife wanted to work herself to death to keep me," he said, but I said (no. You do what you can to keep the children until my debts are paid, and then I'll keep you and the children too." So I weat to work, paying right and left; and when all was paid off I began to what I ought to have spent some with you. And many's the time I've been tempted to come—and I'm empted still; but when the feeling comes over must.

"They won't trust him a penny," returned her husband with a grin—"he's tried it on and failed, and so I've got him If he does not pay up I'll make him.

"There's nothing to get out of that house," said Mrs. Rewitt, shaking her head. "I've heard that ther's not a chair for them to sit down upon; and Jerry's wife—clean and tidy as she manages to keep herself—looks more like a skeleton than a woman.

"That's Jerry's lookout," replied Mr. Rewitt, cooly, "If he can't afford it, he shouldn't drink!"

The subject was dismissed and Jerry forgotten in the noise and bustle of the usual evening business About nine o'clock Jerry's wife, to the astonishment of both Mr. Rewitt and his wife, appeared in the bar; but not as they supposed for drink."

"My husband tells me," she said, "that he has a heavy score here. Ilow much is it?"

"I'm almost too busy to tell you," replied the landlord, "but if it is pressing I will reckon it up."

"I'ti spressing, and I will be very thankful if you will let me know at once what it is," returned the poor woman, who was indeed wan and pale, and almost justified the title of "skeleton," which Mrs. Rewitt and three is not much standing disgrace about that lot; credit if anything."

"O'll yes—yes," returned the landlord, "but if it is pressing I will reckon it up."

"I'm almost too busy to tell you," replied Learn to be a have sindeed wan and pale, and almost justified the title of "skeleton," which Mrs. Rewitt had given'her.

The landford went through the chalks twice, and finally announced that Jerry war, indebted to him to the amount of two pounds seventeen shillings and four pence. Jerry's wife received the amouncement with a look of quiet dismay, thanked the landlord and then left the house.

"I suppose she is thinking to make an effort to pay it off," said Mr. Rewitt, addressing his better half, "and I hope she will; but I fancy it will be a little too much for her."

For a whole week nothing was seen or heard of Jerry; but at the end of that time his wife appeared and put down five shillings on the counter.

"Will you please take that off the amount sir," she said, "and give me a recopt?"

This was done with a gracious smile and Jerry's wife departed. Mr. Rewitt announced his having hit the right nail on the head. The wife of the cobbler was making an effort to clear off her husband's debt.

At the end of another week a second five shillings was paid, and then harvest came on —truly a harvest to the agricultural laborer, as at that time le gathers in clothing, and whatever necessaries his harvest money will enable him to procure. All the tradesmen in the little village were busy, and even Jerry was reported to be fall handed. But he did not come near "The Oram Arms" for drim.

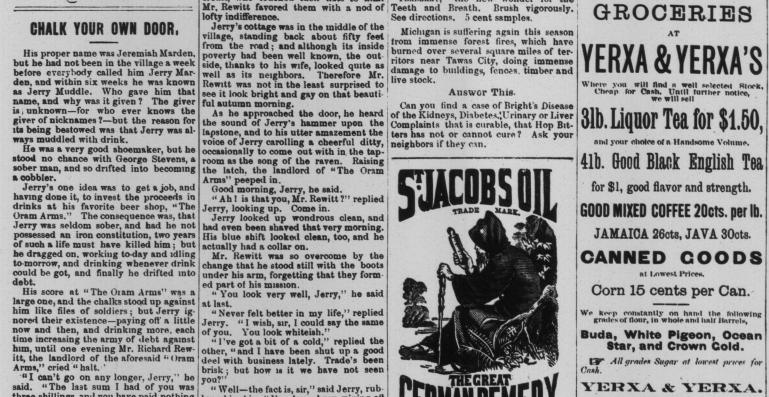

On the third week Jerry's wife brought ten shillings, and on the fourth fifteen, to the great joy and satisfaction of Mr. Rewitt, whose joy, however, was allowed by the fear that he had lost a good customer. He resolved to look up Jerry as soon as another instalment of his account was another instalment of his account w

Measrs. Editors —
The abovesis a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass, who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the 'Dear Friend of Woman,' as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is sealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a . Ife-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and, the vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and, the vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and, the vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and an astisfied of the truth of this.

new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, ness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, begression and indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1, per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect nealth by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply,
