People who would not dream of letting such an absurdity as "he do" cross their lips seize every occasion to declare that "he don't," without apparently the least idea that they are offending against the laws of language. It is very nearly as easy to say "he doesn't"—one would not be so unreasonable as to look for a complete "he does not" in this age of scuttle and rush—and the grammatical integrity of the phrase ought to compensate for the labor of an extra syllable.
