LAURIER'S JURISDICTION.

The development of our trade with Great Britain is the leading question now before the people of Canada. These facts are admitted: Great Britain prefers to trade with the colonies rather than with foreign nations, other things being equal, or approximately so; Canada is capable of producing a very large proportion of the very products that Great Britain chiefly imports. The London Times admits that, while Canada now supplies only one-fourteenth of the food requirements of Great Britain, it could easily supply one-third. We say Canada is able to supply seventy-five per cent. of Great Britain's food requirements, if not one hundred per cent. The statement has been made by several authorities in Great Britain that the colonies, conjointly, can supply the raw products of all kinds that are consumed in Great Britain. On the other hand, Great Britain is able to supply Canada with the raw materials that are not supplied by the United States, Germany and other progressive countries. Great Britain's trade is complementary to that of the colonies. The Mother Country is deficient in the production of broad-stuffs and raw materials. The colonies are wanting in manufactures. Independence, neither the Mother Country nor the colonies are self-contained, or self-supporting. Conjointly they form a perfect whole, an Empire that can produce within itself all its own requirements. We take it there is no opposition in Canada to the development of closer relations between Canada and Great Britain. The Globe yesterday, while it argues that no offer of preferential trade has been made by the British Government, yet admits that a preference for Canadian goods in the English market would be a good thing for Canada, and that "there is no one so witless as to suppose that the proposal would be rejected by the rulers of Canada." Preferential trade, then, is a good thing for Canada. The people of Great Britain believe that Canada's preferential schedule is an excellent thing for Great Britain. The Globe agrees with The World that the British preferential schedule would be an excellent thing for Canada.

Great Britain has expressed its gratitude to Canada for the twenty-five per cent. cut in the tariff that has been made in its favor. However well disposed Canadians may be towards Great Britain no amount of sentiment and love for the Mother Country can prove so effective in inducing Canadians to purchase British goods as the declaration of this twenty-five per cent. cut will. Sentiment is all right enough in its place, but it is the figures in the tariff that tell. Figures talk, as they say, and never more loudly than in a case of this kind. We believe that Great Britain is fully as well disposed towards Canada as the latter is towards the Mother Country. We learn that British merchants and the consuming public are voluntarily showing a preference for Canadian goods offered for sale in England. This voluntary preference is very acceptable so far as it goes, but we would much rather see this sentiment backed up by a business tariff, just as Canada's sentiment has been confirmed by a twenty-five per cent. preferential cut.

The World does not go so far as to say that Canada should not have preference to Great Britain that is not acknowledged by a corresponding preference by Great Britain towards Canada. But what we do say is this: that Canadian statesmen should do all in their power, in a legitimate way, to induce Great Britain to follow the example of this country. Let us argue our side of the case. We may rest assured that British statesmen will be able to safeguard the interests of their own people. The Globe lays down the astonishing doctrine that Canada's statesmen should not presume to tender any advice to the British Government as to reciprocal trade. How very different this theory is from the practice of the same Government in dealing with the United States! How many journeys have Canadian Liberal statesmen made to Washington to induce United States legislators to adopt a tariff that would be favorable to both countries? How much humiliation have our Liberal statesmen undergone in soliciting, in beseeching United States Senators and Representatives to make a reciprocal treaty with Canada? Our statesmen have made many a trip to Washington to convince Congressmen that it was in the interests of the United States as of Canada that the duty on lumber should be $1 instead of $2, and similarly in regard to the duties on a score of other articles. But, according to The Globe, it is not the business of our statesmen to argue the pros and cons of preferential trade with Great Britain. This is the explanation given by The Globe for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's apathy, or rather opposition, to preferential trade while in Great Britain: It did not come within his province to tender any advice to the members of the British Government. The position thus taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and The Globe is as unbecomingly and inconsistent as it is disastrous to this country and unpopular. Canada is a part and parcel of the British Empire. It is not only the privilege but the duty of Canadian statesmen to offer counsel on all questions affecting the welfare of the Empire. When a policy arises that will benefit Canada and the Mother Country at the same time it is the duty of Canadian statesmen to advocate the adoption of such a policy with all the force and persistence at their command. It necessarily let them make trips to London to further a policy of this kind. There is surely more reason in going to London, where we are not strangers, than to Washington, where we are foreigners and where we come in contact with statesmen who are openly hostile to this country. If it is right and proper to give advice in Washington, it is much more so in London.

The Globe and other Liberal papers imagine they have answered our charges against Sir Wilfrid Laurier when they say that no offer of preferential trade was made to him. Technically this may be correct, but it is beyond question that the Secretary of State for the Colonies publicly declared himself in favor of preferential trade, and he invited the colonial premiers to discuss this subject, among others, in the several conferences that were held. We believe that Canadian statesmen should be content with arguing the case as it affects Canada, and not going out of their way to show that a preference for colonial products would be inconsistent with Great Britain's fiscal policy and injurious to the people of Great Britain. As we have said above, let the statesmen of Great Britain look after their end of the case. Sir Wilfrid Laurier would have only done his duty to Canada if he had smitten the British ear with the cry that Canada could feed the Empire and would undertake to feed the Empire under a five or ten per cent. preference. The opportunity was ripe for the announcement of such a policy. The British people were only too anxious to do something to show their good will towards Canada and the other colonies. They denounced the treaties to help on the good cause of preferential trade. The same statesmen who recommended the repeal of the treaties also recommended the establishment of an Imperial Zollverein. As we obtained the one so we might have got the other, or at least an earnest of its later fulfillment, had not our own Premier thrown cold water on the project, undertaking, as he did, to argue the case of the English Colonies instead of the wheat producers of this country.

So much for the past. What now of the future? Does Canada believe in preferential trade or does she not? If we desire to see Great Britain give a duty of ten per cent. on foreign breadstuffs while Canadian breadstuffs have free access? If we do, then we are particularly unfortunate in having at the head of our Government a statesman who made such a mess of this question while he was in England that Mr. Chamberlain tells us he would not touch it again with a pair of tongs.

THE RETROSPECT OF A DECADE.
There was a conspiracy started in this country by Erasmus Wiman in 1887 to bring about what he called the commercial union of Canada and the United States. But annexation was the short and straight name for the movement. Mr. Wiman succeeded in interesting many newspapers, mostly Liberal and politicians, also Liberal, in his project. Some of these did not go so far as Wiman, but worked with him, sympathized with him, held up the United States as Canada's "natural market" and advocated the surrender of our commercial independence, the absolute control of our tariff, to the United States. Some called the movement one in favor of "free trade," others spoke of it as the "Continental-to-which-we-belong policy."

The Globe favored it. Mr. Laurier favored it. The Liberal party favored it. They ridiculed in those days "closer union" with the Mother Country and "preferential trade." The United States was everything to them and the Mother Country nothing. We quoted Mr. Laurier's speech in Massachusetts yesterday. He said: "I prefer the Yankee dollar to the British shilling, especially when the dollar is so near and the shilling is so far away." A newspaper called The Mail was also a commercial union newspaper. It declared "so much the worse for British connection." It was in close touch with Tail-Twain, Penn of The New York Sun. Mr. Wiman was its most valued contributor and inspiration.

The World was one paper that fought the commercial unionists from start to finish. It was present at the funeral and helped to put in the disinfesting quicklime about the corpse. The Globe, The Mail and the other associates of Mr. Wiman do not like to be reminded of this episode in their career. The Globe is, in substance, saying these days, We are the "loyal party," we are the party who had the obnoxious treaties denounced.

So you are. But it was an accident that put you in the position to denounce the treaties; now you are for preferential trade and closer union because you are in office and found your continental policy a failure and worse than a failure, a disgrace; you have made capital for yourselves because you have professed loyalty, abandoned your old cries and are carrying out, in your own way, the national and British policy of Sir John Macdonald.

But The Globe's commercial union and Mr. Laurier's Boston speeches, and Mr. Charlton's Washington memoirs, and Has Wiman's propaganda, and The Mail's visits to New York, do not look very well together with the preferential trade, treaty denouncing policy of the Liberals of to-day. And if we have to recall these and other things, it is because these worthies haven't the grace to keep silence.

Salmon Run Breaks the Record.

The Monster Shoe House

210 YONGE STREET. 510 QUEEN WEST.
Nearly every shoeman in town will tell you—"Guinanes can't sell shoes at such prices—and make a profit."

But we do make a profit—of course we lose on some lines when we are anxious to close them out quick. But generally we make a profit. If we paid what every shoeman pays for shoes—couldn't make any profit. Take the purchase of $12,000 worth of Hypothecated Shoes—we made $4600 clear on the deal—$4600 more than we could have made buying the shoes in the regular way.

Deconstructive Forest Fire.
Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 9.—The forest fire which has been raging for two or three weeks in the Black Horn country continues unabated and is spreading rapidly, fanned by high gale. Already about twenty miles square are reported covered, and millions of feet of timber destroyed. The settlers have fought the fires constantly, until forced to give up. Another fire is reported over the divide in Big Horn country.

Bell Pianos.

VISITORS to the Fair would do well to inspect our exhibit of PIANOS and ORGANS, which for Neatness of Design, Finish, Durability, TONE and General Excellence have never been surpassed by ourselves or any manufacturer. Our new "SERAPHONE" Organs are unquestionably the most Pipe-like Reed Organs ever constructed, and are well worthy of a careful examination. The world-renowned diva, Adelina Patti, writes:

"The exquisite organ which I recently purchased from you gave entire satisfaction. The tone is the most pipe-like I have ever heard in a reed instrument."
Signed, ADELINA PATTI."

Bell Organs.

The Bell Pianos still retain their acknowledged superiority and are unequalled by any instrument of Canadian manufacture. The following testimonials speak for themselves, and are among the many which have been and are constantly being received:

Mr. Harold Jarvis,
the Renowned Tenor, says:
"I have sung to your piano a great many times during my engagements throughout the Dominion and have always been greatly impressed with the brilliancy, fulness, and sympathetic tone of the Bell Pianos, and support they give to the voice, and consider them unsurpassed by any piano-organ ever larger, brighter and more pleasant to testify to the high excellence of your pianos."

From Madame Albani's Special Accompanist:
THE QUEEN'S, Toronto, Feb. 22, 1897.
To Whom It May Concern:
In connection with my visit to Canada as pianist to Madame Albani, I have had occasion to observe various makes of pianos, and have been much impressed with the advances which are made in the art of piano construction in this young and flourishing country. One of the most recent instruments to arrest my attention, and I might say one of the best—is the well-known "Bell" Piano. Its tone is admirable throughout, and the touch firm and responsive—just what we musicians like—in fact, an excellent piano in every respect. The new Orchestral Attachment (which, I understand, can be obtained on "Bell" Pianos only) is also an excellent feature, and one which will doubtless excite interest with all classes. I do not hesitate to say that I consider the "Bell" Piano a good, honest instrument, and so recommend it to any intending purchaser.
