CHAPTER XIX
Lady Carruthers Receives.

Old Lady Carruthers was sitting by a beamed-up fire in her drawing room, the biggest, squarest room in her big, square old house, which, though it stood in a good-sized park, had only a big, square lawn between it and the high road.

Amid the crowd of chairs and couches, the little crumpled-up figure by the fire, might as first glance have passed unnoticed, but as the door opened and Lady Carruthers looked sharply around, her presence at once dominated her cumbersome surroundings, as completely as it ruled any circle of her acquaintance.

"And what news of Kilmory today?" she asked, briskly, as Ashe entered.

"She is better," he replied, as Sim told me in a burst of confidence," said Ashe, smiling. "Whether he meant to imply anything—that she was not better in some other way, I don't know."

"I wonder they keep that doddering old idiot," said Lady Carruthers, wrathfully. In years, Sim might have been her son, but that was of no consequence. "In fact, I have no patience with any man who has mismanaged the whole affair. How did they let the girl fall ill again—have a fit, or whatever it was. They'll make her the talk of the country; though indeed, she's that already."

"The country is immensely sympathetic, meantime. I met half a dozen acquaintances between here and Stormont."

"Oh, yes," croaked. "They tell me Stormont's been like a crier fair, and she's behind the door all day, but that won't last. I've told Marian till I'm tired that the one thing to do is to marry the girl. You've always that to your credit, and whatever happens afterward—well, you're not responsible for it, and there's plenty to take the risk meantime. Oh, yes," with a lightning quick glance and a dry laugh. "Is that the game? I thought I'd ask you here just to see what the chief you had on hand. I knew there was something up. You're very clever, Evelyn, too clever at times, but if I were you, I think I'd try the possible."

"It is not only I who am too clever, I think," said Ashe, with a careless laugh, "but after all, if one chooses, is anything impossible?" leaning back against the high marble mantelpiece, white ones, now yellowed with the years.

The old lady's eyes ran over the tall, graceful figure and the distinctive face, as if she were appraising them point by point.

"Not enough, my dear Evelyn," with a judicial summing-up air, "unless you've got some trump up your sleeve, which would be quite in character. No doubt you think you have. But if there were no other reasons, a Stormont arranged long before, and in spite of David's unenviable shilly-shallying, I think they'll pull this one off yet—unless, of course, there is some fresh scrap, what you call it. I think I'll leave the matter to you, as I think it was at first, and no wonder, for he has flesh and blood to deal with now, not a well-brought-up shadow. I like the way the lad spoke the other night. You'll have to reckon with him."

"Yes, I'd better begin to lay out my plan of campaign," said Ashe jestingly, when a second time the door opened and "Mr. Conyers" was announced.

Lady Carruthers broke into one of her wild laughs, while the two young men exchanged nods, which are an Englishman's usual greeting to friend or acquaintance, or even foe.

"You've come very late, Basil," said the old lady. "But if you'd been behind that for once there was an exception to the general rule."

"Match obliged, though I don't know what I've done to deserve it. It's rather an exception to your practice, as to the general rule, isn't it? But I dare say you'll make up for it some other time," said Basil, with a laugh.

"Very likely," in no way displeased, "and no doubt you'll deserve it, too; but what's the very latest bulletin of our young lady? Mr. Ashe has brought me his news. He rides twice a day, post haste, to Stormont for it. But perhaps you have even later intelligence."

"She is much better," said Basil, rather shortly. "People have been very kind, but really there has been rather a needless fuss made over it."

"No, it is time we were seeing each other," said Isabel, in an odd, hard voice, and she looked at him with a rather bitterly what strange element of discord had so cruelly angled all the beauty and harmony of life.

The children of the Protestant Orphan Asylum had a pleasant outing in Rockwood Park yesterday afternoon. Through the kindness of Frank White they all took a ride down the "shoot the chute."

The Beekman Tourist Party registered at the Victoria and conducted by F. E. Mahon made the trip up the St. John river yesterday. They will return here for this evening and make the trip to Digby this morning.

NEW LENGTH OF COAT WITH MANDARIN ARMHOLE.

The features of this semi-dressy tailored suit of Copenhagen blue cloth are the new length of coat—26 inches, and the mandarin armhole, or rather the mandarin effect, because the armhole is in reality of natural size and the Japanese effect is created with a wide band of the cloth set on the coat a little above the arm size, and extends out over the sleeve and down on the body of the jacket almost to the waistline. The back as well as the front of the coat is a wide loose fitting and elaborately braided with some lace in scroll design. The collarless neck fits up closely around the collar of the dress waist, and there is a fancy vest of putty white cloth embroidered with silver and three shades of blue silk. Like all the dressy tailored suits, the sleeves are three-quarters length and medium in size. These are elaborately braided, and instead of cuffs the fullness is pleated in at the elbow to the shape of the arm, and the braiding takes the form of a high cuff. The skirt is of walking length and consists of pleated and plain gored, the pleated gored being in the front and the back and at the sides. Braided designs extend from the front panel around to the back width and point up high on the sides almost to the edge of the coat. A hat of blue dipped beaver, with trimmings of ostrich plumes and tulle ribbon in the same shade is worn with this suit.

MILK MAY BE HIGHER

Milk Dealers May Advance Prices Because of Board of Health's Action.

The Board of Health now demands that all milk dealers must sterilize and cleanse their cans before returning them to be refilled, as required by section 9 of the regulations which the board will now put in force. This was decided at a special meeting held yesterday afternoon, when it was also reported that the committee to secure a site at the L. C. R. depot for the proposed plant to sterilize milk cans, had not succeeded.

A. E. Macaulay, secretary of the Milk Dealers' Association, says, that should the regulation be put in force, the price of milk will probably advance one cent per quart.

When the new milk regulations were framed the vendors objected to section 17 which reads as follows:

"Every licensed vendor in milk before returning or delivering any cans or other vessel for holding milk to any railway or other transporting agency for the purpose of having the same refilled, shall sterilize such cans by boiling water or steam, and shall otherwise thoroughly cleanse the same."

Notices will immediately be served on the vendors that they must comply with the section or be proceeded against. The officials of the board say they regret the refusal of the board to put in force, the price of milk will probably advance one cent per quart.

Mr. Macaulay adds that since the board of health will not erect a sterilizing plant, the milk dealers will have to do it themselves, but in all probability the public will have to pay for it.

Mr. Macaulay also called in question the section which required dealers to have their cans inspected by a veterinary surgeon before a license could be issued. This inspection, he said, only took place once a year, and naturally a special effort was made to have everything in good order for the occasion. He advocated the appointment of a government inspector whose business it would be to make inspection several times a year, not only of the cans but the barns and other buildings where milk was kept.

In conclusion Mr. Macaulay said that the only thing he could see that the board of health could hope to do by making so many regulations, was to persuade the public they were doing something. The public, he added, paid the bills and if the board kept on they would force milk up to ten cents a quart, the price paid in Montreal.

The N. B. Southern line was tied up again yesterday and no trains left Carleton station. The last regular train left on Tuesday morning. This was hauled by locomotive No. 171 and on the return trip when near Musquash the engine and tender jumped the track. Wrecking crews were soon on the spot and as a result of their labors the delayed train reached the west side station about 9 o'clock last night and the track was clear. The train will run as usual this morning. It is said that the cause of the accident was due to engine 171 being too heavy for the rails.

THE ST. JOHN BYE-ELECTION

It is Understood That it Will be Held on Sept. 18 or 19

Three Other Vacancies in the Commons Will be Filled on the Same Date—Foreign Trade Returns.

Ottawa, Aug. 21—Four bye-elections to fill gaps in the membership of the Canadian commons, will be held next month, probably on September 18 or 19.

The government will likely have a meeting on Saturday, when the question of fixing the date will be finally dealt with. There are three vacant seats in Ontario and one in New Brunswick. Three were occasioned by death and one by resignation.

London constituency was opened by the resignation of Hon. Charles Hyman, Wellington, by the death of Thomas Martin, Northumberland, by the death of Edward Cochrane, and St. John city and county by the death of Dr. A. A. Stockton.

Canada's foreign trade totalled $24,156,015, in the first four months of the current fiscal period, from the first of April to the first of August. This is an increase over the similar period the year before of $22,090,054.

During the five months the imports totalled $131,803,070, an increase of $25,010,424.

Imports of dutiable goods totalled $77,768,121, an increase of $15,470,746. Free imports totalled $13,739,825, an increase of $8,703,700.

The duty collected amounted to $20,383,734, an increase of $4,214,428.

During the four months there was a decrease of $1,948,063 in the volume of exports, which were of the value of $20,383,945. However, exports are now showing an increase and it is expected that the remaining months of the year will more than make up for the falling off of the first few months.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it swells and shuts out the sound, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. It is entirely cured by Dr. HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Send for circulars, free.

Politicians at the Grand Falls Picnic

Premier Robinson and Members of the Government, Senator Costigan and Others Present.

Grand Falls, N. B., Aug. 21—Grand Falls has been alive during these two days on account of the large attendance at the picnic held in aid of the new R. C. church.

Upon an invitation from Senator Costigan four members of the provincial government were present and delivered suitable addresses. Yesterday afternoon the speaking was done by Senator Costigan, Chief Commissioner LaBelle, and Surveyor General Sweeney. This forenoon, Premier Robinson, Solicitor General Burgess, and Tweeddale, M. P., were the speakers. There was a large crowd in attendance during both days. Last evening there was a ball given by the Andover Orchestra in Kerton's Hall, which was largely attended.

Between forty-five and fifty of the members of the N. B. military veterans' association and their lady friends enjoyed a very pleasant outing to the Willows yesterday. The party had dinner on their arrival and after dinner sports were indulged in. Mayor Sears, who was with the party, made the presentation of prizes in the cabin of the boat on the way home.

The prize winners were: Ladies' race, Miss Knowles, a case of scissors; quilt throwing, G. T. Thompson, a sportsman's knife; rifle shooting, James McCarty, combination knife. The weather was perfect and everyone enjoyed the outing.

THE MEDICINAL VALUE OF FRESH FRUIT JUICES

One of the Greatest Wonders of the Age.

Hundreds Have Been Made Well by Taking Advantage of an Ottawa Physician's Discovery.

Everyone knows how beneficial fruit is, when eaten regularly. Fruit is nature's laxative—the finest kidney regulator—and the ideal skin tonic. Unfortunately, the medicinal principle of fruit occurs only in minute quantities. In order to consume enough fruit to relieve biliousness, one would also consume a large amount of woody fibre or pulp, which would upset the stomach and impair digestion.

An Ottawa physician discovered a way to get around these difficulties. He pressed the juice from apples, oranges, figs and prunes—and then forced one more atom of the bitter principle from the discarded orange peel, into the concentrated juices. This formed a new compound, having all the curative effects of fresh fruit—and in a highly intensified degree. These valuable tonics and internal antiseptics were added and the whole pressed into tablets.

These are "Fruit-a-tives" the wonderful Liver Tablets you hear so much about. "Fruit-a-tives" cure the most obstinate cases of non-action of the bowels, biliousness, headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness, kidney trouble, rheumatism, scalds and neuralgia. They are the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world, while their action on the skin, in clearing and beautifying the complexion, is nothing short of marvelous. Ask your druggist for "Fruit-a-tives" and see that you get them. 50c a box, $ for $2.50. By mail, postpaid, from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INDISCRETION. Dorothy—I am filled with ecstasy when I surrender myself to the embrace of the waves. Pauline—Really, your love affairs do not interest me.

KINDLY ASSISTED.

He was a man whose clothes were patched but clean, and one look into his face was enough to show that although he might be hard up himself he had a feeling for those who were worse off. He left the elevator at the seventh floor and entered the gorgeous suite of rooms of the Jim Crow Mining Company and said to the smiling gentleman who came forward: "You have a mine in Colorado?"

"We have, sir."

"It will soon be worth ten per cent. above par."

"Not the slightest doubt of it." "But you are willing to let the public in on the ground floor and divide a good thing with them?"

"That's it—that's the idea." "You feel for quinquenns and widows and orphans?"

"We do, in particular." "This Jim Crow mine is certain to be a hummer!" continued the caller.

"Just as sure as the sun is to rise tomorrow." "That's it. The minute we strike that lode we are all millionaires."

"Well, I'm willing to do my part. Take this as a free gift to help you hang on. I give it willingly. I am a philanthropist myself. In fact, I made the green goods business what it is."

He laid seven cents on the desk and turned away and was seen no more. He had waited for no thanks. He hadn't waited to see the team of gratitude that the Jim Crow as he realized that he could now go forward and bring joy to ten thousand happy homes. JOE KERR.

WHERE DOES THE PAPER GO?

The first question asked by a general advertiser. The Telegraph and Times reach that class of people who subscribe and agree to pay for the reading privilege. These papers go first hand from the publishers by carrier and not through street boys to be left in office or store by purchaser after reading. Common sense teaches that every paper passed into homes direct will be read. The Telegraph and Times are home papers. Do they contain your advertisement?
