

SEVENTEEN MORE ON SATURDAY

Recruiting Meetings Are Showing Good Results

PLANS FOR THIS EVENING

Corporal John Farmer Wins Russian Decoration - Recommended For D. C. M. - Sergeant John McMullin III at Shorncliffe

Lieut. Col. George W. Fowler, M. P. was the chief speaker at the recruiting meeting on King Square on Saturday night when the following orators - Walter Scott, William B. Scott, (brothers), Fairville; Leonard Campbell, St. John; Edwidge Edwin Barnes, Lynn, Mass. (Canadian parentage); Charles Wainwright Beasley, St. John; Edward Charles Kirkpatrick, Riverview; Allan Dobbins, Bothesay; James Allen Bowes, St. John; Henry Albert Baynton, London, England; Fred Barton, St. John; A. Allington, St. John; Vaughan Keith McDonald, Harwick, N. B.; L. Ingraham, St. John; T. A. Scobie, St. John; James W. Boyd, George J. Wymond, Frank McPeak, St. John.

The speakers at this evening's meeting will include Dr. G. M. Campbell, of Mount Allison and Rev. David Hutchinson, D. D., St. John. Tomorrow Mrs. Netta B. Brown, who has had wonderful success in Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver, and last week in Fredericton in organizing a Women's Volunteer Reserve, who pledge themselves to dress in khaki uniform and to do all that they can for the duration of the war to aid patriotic purposes, is expected to come to the city and to form a branch of the body here. She has already been promised the support of several of the ladies' organizations. Mrs. Brown will speak at the public meeting on the square tomorrow evening.

In Cape Breton. Cape Breton has established a record for smart enrollment of 188 men for the 8th Battery of Canadian Artillery. They were all enlisted at Sydney within two days and a half, under Major Crowe. Reserves up to ten per cent are also being taken on. The battery only has twelve men not of Canadian birth - also a record. It is believed Nova Scotia is doing wonderfully well for recruiting, as the 1,200 men in Camp Sussex to date show.

St. John Boy Honored. Corporal John Farmer, a son of Mrs. E. S. Jones, 975 Main street, who was one of the Canadians to receive a Russian decoration recently, has just written to his mother a letter in which he says: "I have something of importance to tell you, I bet you will be glad. 'Remember,' you said, bring me back a V. C. Well, dear, I haven't done that. But yesterday's London Gazette gave a list of Russian decorations and my name was down on the list for the Medal of St. George, 4th class."

Farmer's captain also sends a letter in which he pays the following compliment to Farmer's gallantry: "Perhaps I am saying a little bit more than I actually should, but cannot help telling you that after the battle of Ypres he was recommended for the D. C. M., only a certain number being granted, though Jack didn't just happen to be a lucky number, but he did as well, and even better than some that received it. He carried despatches under terrific shell fire with never a thought for himself, and being only a lad of nineteen it is all the more praiseworthy. "When the general heard the news, standing just by the dugout, he shook Jack by the hand and with a glint in his eye congratulated him, for the general admires bravery beyond all else; besides, he actually saw some of the things Jack did at that time."

III at Shorncliffe. The casualty lists for Sunday included the name of John McMullin, St. John, classed as seriously ill. He is a sergeant saddler now at Shorncliffe, England, with the 6th Mounted Rifles, and is in hospital there. He is a brother of William McMullin, Moncton.

The canvass starts next Monday. The families of our fighting men are hoping you'll stand by them!

Russian Cabinet Hasn't Resigned. Petrograd, Sept. 12, via London, Sept. 12, 12 p. m. - The statement published in the United States that the cabinet of Premier Goremykin had resigned, and that a coalition cabinet would be formed, is erroneous. The cabinet has not resigned.

FAMILY FOOD. Cisp, Toothsome, and Requires No Cooking.

A little boy asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped his family. "She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention where she visited. "While I was there I used the food regularly. I gained weight and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in the family regularly. "My little 18-months-old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill while teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk. "Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She grew well and round and fat as fast as possible on Grape-Nuts. "Some time ago several of the family were stricken with La Grippe at the same time, and during the worst stages they could not retain anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else was nauseating. "We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family. "There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A French mother and her children, who will not leave the ruins of their home, "somewhere in France." Official photo by photograph service of the French army.

UNDER FIRE IN ALSACE-LORRAINE TRENCHES. This picture is made from an official photograph from the photograph service of the French army. It was taken in actual battle and shows Red Cross men removing a wounded soldier while his comrades, at loopholes, are firing on the enemy.

FIELD CROPS OF THE MARITIME PROVINCES

A special press bulletin issued by the census and statistics office at Ottawa gives the following at the end of August as summarized from telegrams received from the Dominion experimental farms and stations and various sources: -Beneficial rains fell on 17 days, causing heavy growth of all cereals, roots and corn, cereals have ripened rapidly and prospects are excellent for a big harvest which is just commencing. A heavy crop has been safely stored. Summer-ripe hay has been saved in good condition. The weather has been ideal for both roots and cereals; all crops are looking well.

Nova Scotia, Kentville - Grain, corn and roots are exceptionally good, but grain in many places is badly laid by wind and rain on the 17th. Hay has been late and the quality is below average. Potatoes have blighted in many sections. River John - Owing to much broken weather a quantity of hay is not yet housed. Grain is ripening slowly and is not a very good color. Turnips and potatoes are doing well. Antigonish - A fair bulk of a bumper crop of hay has been saved. The grain crop is excellent but much is badly laid up by heavy rains of 29th and 31st. Potatoes are uneven and some blight is showing. Amherst - August proved very unseasonable. A heavy storm has broken grain down badly; the precipitation being three inches within twenty-four hours. Hay is very backward; much yet to be cured. Root crops are doing nicely and barley is just ripening.

New Brunswick, Fredericton - Twelve rainstorms, making the total precipitation 4.11 inches, with eighteen cloudy days made a poor harvest month. Grain is filling well; only a little has been cut; frost on 28th damaged some sections. Potatoes are good, where sprayed late. Blight is prevalent. The root crop is an extra one. Much hay is yet uncured. Anagance - The harvest has commenced early; the grain has filled well; all root crops are good. Heavy frost on the 27th did considerable damage on low lands.

Give the slogan to your neighbor - $50,000 in a week!

REMARKABLE DOG

Traces and Brings Back Hidden Coin Even After It Was Found and Carried Off M. Dumont, a tradesman of the Rue St. Denis, Paris, offered to lay a wager with a friend with whom he was walking in the Boulevard St. Antoine that if he were to hide a six-livre piece in the dust his dog would discover it and bring it to him. The wager was accepted and the piece of money secreted, after being carefully marked. When they were some distance from the spot M. Dumont called to his dog that he had lost something and ordered him to seek it. The dog by name Caniche, immediately turned back while his master and his companion continued their walk. Meanwhile a traveler who happened to be just then returning in a chaise from Vincennes, perceived the piece of money which his horse had kicked from its hiding place. This traveler alighted picked up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind by his master, thought the dog was trying to make friends with him, and as the animal was handsomely determined to keep him. He gave him a good supper and on retiring to bed took him with him to his chamber. But no sooner had the traveler removed his breeches than the dog seized them. The owner, of course, took them away. Then Caniche began to bark at the door, which the kindly traveler opened, thinking that the dog wished to go out. Caniche instantly snatched up the breeches and away he flew. The traveler posted after him in his night cap anxious for his purse which was full of money. Caniche ran full speed to his master's house, which he reached a moment before his pursuer, who was naturally out of breath and furiously enraged. "Sir," said Caniche's master, "my dog is a faithful creature and if he has run away with your breeches it is because you have in them money that does not belong to you."

up the money, and was driving off to his inn, in the Rue Font-aux-Choux, just as Caniche reached the spot where the money had been hidden. Caniche at once followed the chaise, entered the inn and stuck close to the traveler, leaping up incessantly about him. The traveler, supposing him to be some dog that had been lost or left behind