Mill Tests. Events of the Deal Explained.

·Before Magistrate Macrae this moruing the case of J. A. Lawrence, accused of having obtained money from Cap tain A. E. McCallum by false preten ses, was continued. The prosecution closed their case at the last sitting, and this morning the examination of the witnesses for the defense commenced. The first witness called for the defence was the accused, who contradicted throughout his evidence that already given by the complainant. He explain ed the matter of the mill test and the high assay in an entirely different monner from the way in which they were spoken of by Capt. McCallum in his tes-

John Alfred Lawrence, who was on the witness stand this morning, said he was a rent collector and had been engaged in selling property for other people to a large extent. He first met Capt. McCallum about the end of May of this year, who came to his house and introduced himself. He obtained an option on the Ophir ultimately. He had other dealings with Capt. McCallum, who wanted him to sell his house at Colwood for him. Witness said he was now endeavoring to sell for the Victoria Lumber Company 130,000 acres of timber limits, and a man had been expected daily from London in reference to this all summer. This delayed his trip, waiting for this man's arrival. He went down to Capt. Mc-Callum's house to see it, and found the price put upor it what he considered unreasonable, Capt. McCallum wanting $25,000 for the property, and witness thought it was only worth $6,500. Captain McCallum produced some quartz while he was at his house, which he said came from his mine in the Groundhog Basin. McCallum came continually to his house, bringing pamphlets and letters without end. Witness received the nuggets before he got the option. The quartz specimens were brought to him by Capt. McCallum in July. He did not examine them, but left them lying on the top of the safe. It was about the middle of August of this year that he first heard of the Goldstream property. The Edith and Wonder belonged entirely to him, as he had staked them out when he first went to Goldstream. He wanted to go on and spend money to develop the property. Messrs. Snider and Dalby said they were unable to develop the min2, would give him (witness) five minutes and wanted to know if he would buy to refund the money to him. Witness them out. They each asked three thousand dollars for their claims. Witness | minutes or five years. Capt. McCallum said that this was too high. Ultimately they agreed to take $500 for their room. Witness said he did not know then what a mill test was. On their first visit to the mine Capt. McCallum proposed to him that they put a few shots in the tunnel, and it would look as if they this afternoon.

swindle on the government.
"Well, it would," replied McCallum,
"if you look at it in that light."

During the three or four months in which he had known McCallum, witness said he had received about a hundred letters. He was very sorry he destroy-ed them, as he would, had he kept them, been able to show McCailum in Assays and Other his true light. He did not agree with the proposition regarding the tunnel, nor did he apply for a crown grant. In the matter of the mill test, McCallum, while sitting at lunch with him in his house, said he had been trying to find some way to test Donaldson always seemed doubtful of Donaldson's abilty. He said he was thinking over it and had thought of this plan. He wanted the witness to take the piece of gold which he (McCallum) had given him and show it to Donaldson, telling him that a mill test had been made, and that was the gold resulting from it. Witness said he foolishly fell in with the arrangement, and that same afternoon told Donaldson that a mill test had been made in Seattle of 700 or 300 pounds of ore taken from the dump at Goldstream, Donaldson said he did not believe it. When out at the mine Donaldson wanted to know where ore had been taken from for the mill test. Witness said, pointing to the dump: "Can't you see?" Donaldson said it was too thin. Witness then acknowledged that no mill test had taken place. There was talk later of having a mill test made in San Francisco. Some rock was produced in court, from which the witness said the piece was knocked from which the high assays were made. It came from the back of the house at Gold-stream. Witness said he was considerably surprised when he saw the high assays, and told his friends to keep their ears open, as he believed that the mine had been salted.

An adjournment was then taken until 2:30 this afternoon. When the court reassembled this afternoon Mr. Lawrence continued his evidence. Regarding the interview in his house on Octobed 3rd, when the furniture was broken, witness said that when Capt. McCallum produced the letter he had written, already referred to in the Times, he told him that it was a lie from beginning to end. He said: "How dare you come to me about your own proposition about the mill test?". McCallum then said: "If you yay me back what I have given you, this letter will go no further." Witness' wife came into the room when he told Mc-Callum that his letter was a lie and witness said he handed the letter to her. McCallum tried to snatch it away, saying he did not want Mrs. Lawrence to see it. Witness said she will see it. Mrs. Lawrence then read the letter. McCallum then again said that if he would give him his money back the letter would go no further. He said he said he would not give it to him in five was then walking up and down the as he threw it down: "Now, will you Witness said he had never laid his hands on him,

W. J. Cline Accused of Receiving Money by False Pretenses.

W. J. Cline, a well known contractor appeared in the city police court this morning to answer to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, preferred by George C. Shaw. It appears that the trouble arose over a business transaction by which Mr. Cline was to build a house for Mr. Shaw, on condition that the accused received certain city property, some promissory notes and Mr. Shaw states that Mr. Cline received the amounts stated, but neglected to build the house; hence the suit. The amount mentioned in the summons besides the real estate, are and yellow chrysanthemums tied with two notes, one for $125 and one for $250, and the check payable to J. J.
