incalculable. Unfortunately, some of the most progressive communities in Germany opposed its enactment, disliking particularly the Reichstag aggrandizing a cool fifty per cent of the tax they had formerly collected and spent as they pleased. The Imperial Government, however, put in a strong defence of this division of the spoils, justifying the lion's share for themselves by pointing out how greatly the prosperity of the communities depended in general upon a strong central government, and in particular upon the government railways, highways, telegraph and telephone facilities. "If your lands have mounted higher in value," argued the Imperial Government, "it is because of our multifarious activities, and our stability as a first rate power, and if you municipalities can now repay part of this debt by handing over half of the land value tax, it is only right we should take it." And there the matter now rests.

Land Owners Burdened

With both municipal and Imperial authorities agreed upon the justice of at least a partial application of Henry George's theory, triumph would perhaps appear at hand. A glance at the crying need disclosed by national statistics may somewhat modify too immediate an expectation. The total indebtedness of agriculturists in Germany is estimated five billion dollars—a staggering total, in all conscience. The yearly increase in mortgages in Prussia alone amounts to $77,000,000. The much lauded freehold landed proprietors are such mainly in name. The real owners are the holders of the land mortgages. They have the first right to cover their interest from the returns brought by the use of the land. The law gives that right. The "owner" of the land must wait until all mortgage obligations are met before he is entitled to any of the returns from the land. As anyone can easily take up a land mortgage, and it is regarded more secure than government bonds, the impetus to speculation in these mortgages is very great. That is why the German tax reformers see the path to reform blocked in this direction, and their whole energy is now being devoted to the nationalization of mortgages. Then the Single Tax, they declare, can be easily and justly adopted.

WILD OATS AND FALSE WILD OATS

According to a bulletin recently issued by the Seed Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, there is a type of more or less harmless Wild Oats that is frequently confused with the true Wild Oat which is recognized as being one of the worst of weeds. This publication, prepared by Mr. Norman Criddle, describes field experiments with these two plants and explains by means of charts and descriptive matter their distinguishing characteristics. According to this authority, it is a comparatively simple matter to distinguish the two sorts in the growing stage as the false variety shows the same manner of growth as the cultivated oat while the true Wild Oat exhibits a different habit. In the seed form, the difficulty of telling them apart is greater, more especially in so far as some of the smaller varieties of the False Wild Oat are concerned. With the larger sorts, the difficulty of distinguishing them is lessened, as an experienced eye will at once detect the False Wild Oat by its larger size and its usual close resemblance to the cultivated variety in which it is found. Generally speaking too, the outer seed coat is more open in front with cultivated forms and False Wild Oats so that the inner coat is broadly visible, whereas in Wild Oats, the edges of the outer coat almost meet. Readers interested in distinguishing Wild Oats from False Wild Oats would do well to write to the Publications Branch, Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, for a copy of Bulletin No. S.7.

Some real-estate dealers in British Columbia were accused of having victimized English and Scotch settlers by selling to them (at long range) fruit ranches which were situated on the tops of mountains. It is said that the captain of a steamboat on Kootenay Lake once heard a great splash in the water. Looking over the rail, he spied the head of a man who was swimming toward his boat. He hailed him. "Do you know," said the swimmer, "this is the third time to-day that I've fallen off that bally old ranch of mine?"

Proof of McCormick Binder Merit

FARMERS who know the McCormick binder best are its best friends. McCormick machines have been giving satisfactory service for over seventy years, with a constant increase in the number of sales, proving that the binder has unusual merit and gives satisfactory service.

McCormick binders harvest successfully grain that is short or tall, standing, down, or tangled, or full of green undergrowth. It is built to last and has every necessary adjustment to keep it working up to full capacity. The reel can be adjusted high or low. The guards are almost level with the top of the platform, leaving no place for short grain to lodge. The third packer pulls down the grain from the top of the elevator. The third discharge arm keeps the bound sheaves clear of unbound grain. The floating elevator handles successfully varying quantities of grain. Ask the agent to show you how well the McCormick improved knottor works without close adjustment.

Western Canadian farmers may have the same freedom from harvesting troubles that is enjoyed by other farmers who use McCormick binders and the twine the McCormick agent sells to use with them. See him and have him show you the many good features of McCormick harvesting and haying machines and tools. Get catalogues from him or write the nearest branch house.

"I Want You to Have My New Portable Granary"

"I have a money-saving invention—handy granaries to allow field threshing over your farm. Move them about each year. You save long hauls at harvest time. In spring you scatter small straw stacks—no burning of straw."

"These granaries come in compact bundles. A boy can set up and bolt one together in a few hours. Four padlocks protect the grain. Separator delivery into a spout on the side or into roof manhole—saves work during threshing. Your grain is protected from vermin, wet and thieves. Sell it when you are ready, loading direct from the granary into your wagon, or bagging it. No musty or heated grain. Get my granary and be independent of elevators for selling. Sell at the highest price, no matter how long you store your grain. The Pedlar Granary protects you."
