KLONDIKE NUGGET.

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1903.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Today marks the sixth celebration of the Fourth of July in Dawson.

From the pioneer days of '97, the natal day of the American republic has been observed in Dawson in a manner befitting the sacred traditions which surround it.

Britain and Yankee alike, with goodly sprinkling of a dozen other nationalities, invariably put aside the cares and responsibilities of every day life and lend themselves without dissent or disagreement to the celebration of the Fourth of July.

The Fourth of July belongs to every nation under the sun where government is maintained by the consent of its governed. It is a day consecrated to the theory that individual freedom of action is the only enduring foundation upon which to erect a state.

Two centuries ago the theory was practically untried. A hundred years ago it had found root and had begun to gain strength. Today that theory finds acceptance on every continent and by the end of the century may embrace the world.

In every quarter of civilization some recognition will be taken of the anniversary of American independence, and perhaps in no place will there be more genuine enthusiasm than is being displayed in our own small but thoroughly cosmopolitan community.

FACTS REMAIN.

Anyone who took the time and trouble to wade through the five columns of silly twaddle which filled the editorial page of the Sun of yesterday, must have been struck with the absolute lack of fact and argument.

The Sun must produce something stronger than senseless innuendos and insinuations or give up endeavoring to convince people that it has a case. The logic of the situation is entirely with the Nugget, and the Sun finds refuge in its old time policy of misrepresentation and in calling names.

The Sun is so thoroughly sordid in all its doings that anything in the nature of an honest act, or motive is beyond our contemporary's limited power of conception.

Anything in the nature of an endeavor to instill into the Sun an appreciation of a lofty motive would be a thankless and in fact impossible task.

The Sun "talks the way it is paid" and therefore cannot understand how any other newspaper can be influenced by a different motive.

This understanding of the perverted point of view from which our contemporary regards every matter of a public character is necessary to a complete appreciation of the five columns of editorial nothings which appeared in the Sun of yesterday. Not a single point was made—not a fact deduced to show that the Nugget is wrong—not one single, solitary bit of evidence to prove that this paper has not properly gauged public opinion.

Nothing but abuse, and slander, and when the Sun has exhausted its gutter vocabulary, its entire stock in trade is gone.

The facts, stern and uncompromising, remain and cannot be blotted out, even though the editorial resources of the administration building are brought into action.

The expectations which the public was warranted in believing would follow from the election of Mr. Ross have failed almost entirely of fulfillment. The district is unrepresented at the federal capital and has been for the greater portion of the session, and the promised speech against the Treadgold concession remains undelivered.

The appointment of the investigating commission is the result of the untiring labors of local organizations, in the absence of which, there is every reason to believe that Treadgold would now be in possession of his concession, by virtue of parliamentary ratification.

Fortunately for the welfare of the territory, the people kept their powder dry, even while their faith continued in other words, while they trusted much to their representative they maintained the fight on their own account—and the sequel has proved that they acted wisely in their day and generation. To this day the public has been kept in ignorance of the reasons which have been behind the absence of Mr. Ross from the capital.

With respect to the condition of his health there is expert testimony of an official character on both sides of the case—the preponderance of evidence going to prove that Mr. Ross has been in excellent health ever since the beginning of the session.

In view of all the circumstances or call for an explanation is not within reason, then the ordinary conception of what constitutes a reasonable demand is entirely wrong.

Galveston Released.

Richmond, Va., June 22.—In the chancery court today Judge Grinnard dissolved the injunction restraining the United States government from taking possession of the cruiser Galveston. The federal government stipulates that the ship shall remain the property of the C. D. Trigg creditors until the case is determined by the court of highest resort. The Galveston will be launched this week.

Washington, June 22.—The navy department has been informed of the release of the Galveston, and steps will be taken to launch the vessel as soon as possible. The creditors of the Trigg company contend that the government would be put to additional expense in completing the Galveston at Norfolk. Should extra expense be occasioned, the government will call on the sureties of the Trigg company to pay any excess fixed by congress.

Ike Jensen, bookkeeper for I. Rosenthal, who has not been outside for nine years, left today for a visit along the coast. He was provided with the usual pair of blinders so that he would not get frightened.

The Nugget's stock of job printing materials is the best that ever came to Dawson.

INSANE MAN COMMITTED

John Ross Warner Will be Sent Out

Suffering From Dementia That Renders Him Incapable of Caring for Himself

John Ross Warner was committed by Mr. Justice Macaulay this morning to the police asylum until such time as he can be taken to the asylum at New Westminster.

Last year Warner served a short time in prison for some minor offence since which time he says he has been unable to sleep. He further says that for some time past and up to the time he was taken into custody he drank very heavily. He has a serious impediment in his speech, being at times scarcely able to talk. Police Surgeon Thompson testified in Warner's case, saying that he is not suffering from acute mania but is wholly incapable of taking care of himself, his malady being of such nature as to be very liable to grow worse unless he receives proper treatment, the doctor said, could not be given here. He recommended that he be sent to an outside asylum. It is said that all the insane patients now here, four in number, will be sent out early next week. Warner's relatives live in Brighton, Mass. He has no property or money.

Three Antlers Interlocked

An Indian from the Flambeau reservation in northern Wisconsin recently came into the fishing resort of Squaw Lake with a curiosity in the way of deer horns he wished to sell. Failing to make a sale he took the horns back to the reservation and has not been seen by white men since then.

His treasure was three sets of antlers inexplicably interlocked, and they were worth considerable money to horn collectors. Two sets of antlers so locked are rare, but not unknown. It is believed that the Flambeau Chippewa has the only set of three locked antlers in the world.

This accident could have happened only in one way. Two bucks of equal strength were fighting in the forest and became locked. Then, while they were still struggling, a third buck appeared in the usual angry temper of these animals in the mating season and charged them both, probably repeatedly, until his own horns became fastened. The spectacle of three huge bucks mated to each other until death would have been a great one if there had been anybody there to see.

The Indian said he found the horns north of Flambeau Lake, about a mile from the water. They were lying on the side of a hill, and there were no bones near them. The condition of the horns proved that the fight occurred not more than two years ago and probably last fall.

The antlers were all of full-growth bucks, showing eight and ten points each. The third pair and been driven into the others just above where they joined, and the branches of them were about equally locked with the branches of the others. They were not broken or chipped.

in any way, proving that when the third buck had made his last charge he was fastened so firmly that there was no room for any one of his points to play in the forks of the others. Indeed, all of the horns were so stoutly joined that they could not be moved at all, being as rigid as if moulded in that fashion from cast steel.—New York Sun.

Now in Seattle

Seattle, June 23.—Prince Henry de Croix, of Belgium, whose ancestry dates back many hundreds of years through noble blood, is a guest of the University Club. He has been in the city since Saturday, and will remain for several days more. In all probability, after leaving Seattle, he will go to Alaska to spend a few weeks at different points, and on returning may sail from this port or from San Francisco for China and Japan. He has not decided definitely on his plans but has those trips in mind.

The prince has been in the United States since early in April. He landed in New York, and after visiting Philadelphia, Chicago, Spokane and other cities of importance came to Seattle, of which, he says, he has heard a great deal in the past few years. This is his first visit to the United States, and during his stay he has been traveling incognito, so that at most of his stops few persons other than the Belgian consuls knew of his presence.

The trip of the prince to this country is for the purpose of his own enlightenment and to study its commercial development, in which, he says, he is greatly interested. While before leaving his native land he was a great believer in the greatness of the United States, he says the treatment he has received everywhere and what he has seen has only served to strengthen his opinion of the country and its people.

The Age of a Horse

Chester, N. Y., June 16.—"The groom that came to Chester with Old Abdallah, the sire of Hambletonian, fifty-five years ago," said a veteran Orange county horseman, "told me how to tell the age of a horse, and it has run in my head ever since. This is the way it ran, and he repeated the following rhyme: To tell the age of any horse, inspect the lower jaw of course, The six front teeth the tale will tell, And every doubt and fear dispel.

The middle "nippers" you behold before the colt is two weeks old; Before eight weeks two more will come; Eight months, the "corners" cut the gum.

The outside grooves will disappear from middle two in just one year, In two years from the second pair, In three the "corners" too, are bare.

At two, the middle "nippers" drop, At three, the second pair can't stop, When four years old, the third pair goes;

At five, a full new set he shows.

The deep black spots will pass from view,

At six years from the middle two;

The second pair at seven years;

At eight, the spot each "corner" clears.

From middle "nippers" upper jaw, At nine the black spots will withdraw,

The second pair at ten are white; Eleven finds the corners light.

As time goes on the horsemen know The oval teeth three-sided grow, They longer get, project before 'Till twenty, when we know no more.

Neck Broken

Peterboro, June 4.—Michael O'Brien, a well known local carrier, was accidentally killed about 5 p. m. yesterday by being thrown out of his cart. He was driving near the railway crossing, when his horse took fright. He fell on his head on some sharp stones lying beside the road and broke his neck. He was aged 63 years, was married, and leaves a family of five daughters and one son. Coroner Gray will not hold an inquest.

Will be Buried Here

Colin Marchison, brother of Alex. Marchison who was drowned in Bonanza Thursday evening, has notified the police that he will be unable to take his brother's remains to their old home in Regina, Saskatchewan, as it would be necessary before attempting the trip, would cost in Dawson $350. For that reason he is not financially able to take his brother's remains home and they will be buried here.

Russell Sage's neglect to "swear off" his taxes will cost him enough to buy a double store full of $8 suits, and there are those who are so sympathetic as not to be sorry for "Uncle Russell"—Everett Record.

Many Injured

Seattle, June 22.—In a collision on the Interurban tracks near Georgetown, which came too suddenly to give any one time to act, one man was seriously injured, half a dozen were badly bruised and shrapnel and scores of occupants on two crowded race track cars were hurt and severely injured yesterday afternoon about 6:20. The injured are: Hill Alexander, of San Francisco, concussion of the brain, resulting from blow on the head, and numerous bruises. Fred Bigger, San Francisco, back hurt and head cut. Henry Rich, San Francisco, head cut, bruised at hip and ankle. Grant Rogers, Whatcom, bruises on limbs, and hands cut. F. L. Housely, Whatcom, legs badly bruised. William Murray, Seattle, finger crushed and left shoulder sprained.

Alexander was removed to the Wayside Mission, where he lay unconscious for hours. It was at first thought that his skull was fractured. The other four men were taken to the Seattle general hospital, where they were attended by the Seattle Electric Company's physician, Dr. Park Willis. Many of those who went to their homes without giving their names were cut by pieces of flying glass or bruised in their falls.

Vesuvius in Eruption

London, June 22.—According to a special dispatch received here from Naples, the volcano Vesuvius is in full eruption. This, the most celebrated volcano in the world, rises from the eastern margin of the Bay of Naples, in Italy, and is the center of a region which has been densely populated for more than 20 centuries. Several times violent eruptions have occurred which have engulfed cities and burned thousands of victims beneath the hot lava. Clouds of cinders have been thrown forth which have destroyed all vegetation in many miles. Usually the more violent eruptions have been preceded by earthquakes.

The engulfing of the ancient city of Pompeii is the most noted of the calamities attributed to the volcano, although since the other big eruption in 1631 it has never released into a state of total quiescence.

Hopeful of Results

Geneva, Switzerland, June 22.—The session of the convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the presiding officer, Lillian M. Stevens, of Utah, read Lady Henry's presidential address, in which she predicted the victory of the Temperance Union fight with complete victory over the liquor traffic.

The said modern government is to the danger, and the fact that Russia, France, Britain were strenuously fighting. Lady Somerset could appeal for the exaltation of the world's Christian Temperance Union could best be seen in the words of its great leader, Miss Frances Willard, "the world wider for women, and like for humanity."
