DUNDONALD FORCIBLY REFUTES ALL THE GLOBE'S CHARGES

Always Has Been and is Still Opposed to Conscription—Made Amendments to Militia Act to Meet Sir Frederick Borden's Wishes—Favored Schools of Instructions.

The following letter was written to The Toronto World by Lord Dundonald:

Dear Sir,—In answer to your enquiry as to the truth of the statements contained in the cuttings from The Toronto Globe, which you have kindly sent me, I am glad to have the opportunity of placing the following facts before you:

The Globe has accused me of advocating conscription in Canada. I always have been and am still opposed to conscription. I will give two public instances only of my opposition to it. Many months ago I wrote to Lord Meath, chairman of the Lords' Drill Association of Great Britain, and stated that in my opinion compulsory service for the British should be limited to his schoolboy days. I repeated my opposition to conscription in public speeches in Canada, notably at the inaugural meeting of the Canadian Club at Ottawa, when I outlined the scheme for the reorganization of the militia.

NO SERVICE IN PEACE.

The militia acts in force in Canada for the last forty years have always given the government power to compel citizens to serve in the militia. The minister of militia in February, 1903, made up his mind to adhere to the principles of the old act in his contemplated bill, and asked me to make any suggestions or improvements in it, taking the old act as a basis. In accordance with his wish I made certain amendments and returned him the act. But I made no change whatever in the direction of increasing the liability of the Canadian citizen to serve in peace time. I simply carried out Sir Frederick Borden's wishes in taking the old Militia Act as the basis and making it clearer and bringing it up to date.

The only increased power which I desired to give the government was the power of forcing the boys of the country to perform 100 drills of one hour each between the ages of 14 and 18, which would of course have been done with their school cadet corps under the new regulations for cadet corps which I was then in process of drafting.

PURELY VOLUNTARY ARMY.

In my recommendations for the reorganization of the militia contained in my reports there is not one word which would tend to compulsory service. I proposed a purely voluntary army for Canada in time of peace.

The old Militia Act said: "The period of service in the active militia in time of peace shall be three years." If strictly carried out, these words would prevent men from serving more than three years. If they wished to, and as it is desirable to retain the services of a certain number of men beyond that period as leaders, I inserted the words "the period of compulsory service shall be three years"; so that voluntary service might be continued in accordance with regulations which would be laid down. My proposed wording has been twisted into a desire on my part to introduce increased severity into the provisions of the Militia Act.

With regard to the suggested power in the bill to increase the permanent corps up to a limit of 5,000 men, I thought it advisable to take power to increase it up to that number if desirable, so as not to have continually to amend the act whenever a small increase was desired; for it must be remembered that Canada is a rapidly growing country with increasing responsibilities. But I have never recommended in any report I have made to the minister any large increase in the permanent corps.

FAVORS SCHOOLS OF INSTRUCTION.

With regard to the charge that I wished to abolish the schools of instruction because I simplified the wording of the clause under which the permanent corps was to be enlisted, it is hardly worth contradiction. I gave months of my time to improving the schools of instruction and making their working more convenient for the militia, and they formed an essential part of the system of training which I was then pressing the minister to adopt, and which has since been adopted.

DUNDONALD.

Crawford Priory, Capar, Effe, Oct. 18, 1904.

THE WORLD TO DUNDONALD.

This is the letter The World addressed to Lord Dundonald that drew his reply as published to-day: The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Dundonald, O. V. O., C. B., etc., 34 Portman-square, London West:

My Lord,—I beg to enclose cuttings from The Globe newspaper of this city, which sufficiently explain themselves. This newspaper in reply has maintained that the inferences drawn from the alterations made by you in the draft bill are wholly unwarranted, and that in making them you had no intention to introduce conscription or compulsory military service by every citizen.

In an interview had with Col. Geo. T. Denison, that gentleman has given it as his opinion that in adding the word "compulsory" your lordship intended to make it clear that a member of the active militia, while bound compulsorily to serve for three years, might voluntarily continue in the corps if he so desired. In view of the use which is being made of your suggested alterations, I think it only fair to you to bring the matter under your notice. This paper will gladly give publicity to your own explanation of the motive which prompted your alterations, or to receive your lordship's permission to deny authoritatively the construction placed upon them by The Globe. I have the honor to be

Your lordship's most obedient servant

The Editor The Toronto World.

In the latter part of September the Toronto Globe, evidently in collusion with the minister of militia, published a virulent attack on Lord Dundonald, the late general officer commanding the militia forces of Canada. In support of its charges that Lord Dundonald desired to introduce "militarism" into Canada, it reprinted in facsimile various parts of a draft militia act which had been submitted to the late general officer commanding the militia forces of Canada. One of these facsimiles showed that the late general officer commanding had introduced the word "compulsory" into the clause specifying the period of service of the active militia, a force raised by voluntary enlistment, and in which entrants engage to serve for three years, and altered "active militia" to "army." In commenting on these alterations, the Globe said: "Lord Dundonald put in the words 'compulsory' and 'army' in the first line, thus making it obligatory upon every citizen to serve in the 'army' in time of peace. It wound up by enquiring of the leader of the opposition whether he favored 'compulsory military service in Canada in time of peace.'"

WORLD REPLIES TO GLOBE.

In answer to the attack made by the Globe, it was pointed out by the World that the clause in question referred exclusively to the "active militia," a corps raised by voluntary enlistment, and could not possibly apply to the ordinary citizen. In an interview published in the World of Oct. 1, Lieut.-Col. George T. Denison, than whom there is no better authority in Canada in matters concerning the militia of Canada, declared that the construction placed by the Globe on Lord Dundonald's alterations was untenable and unsound. Col. Denison gave it as his opinion that Lord Dundonald intended to "provide for the case of a man desiring to remain on the active militia after his period of active service has expired. . . . What he intended to make clear, in my opinion, was that a man's service might be longer than three years, but that in any event it would not be compulsory."

GLOBE'S HARDIHOOD.

On the same date the Globe published another facsimile in which Lord Dundonald had inserted a provision that all the male youths in Canada between the ages of 14 and 18 shall perform "not less than 100 drills of one hour each, under such regulations as may be made."

PERMANENCE OF CURE

THE CHIEF MERIT.

Many so called pile remedies will afford the user slight temporary relief, and the majority of sufferers do not expect the delicate and nervous system of women, and many of those afflicted, have resigned themselves to the situation with never a thought that there is any help in sight for them.

We invite the attention of all such to the experience of the lady whose address is given below.

"I feel it my duty to recommend the Pyramid Pile Cure, for after suffering ten years with a most distressing form of Piles, I am entirely cured, thanks to this remedy. Any one doubting this can write to Margaret Brady, 156 Whitman St., Cleveland, Ohio."

Ten months later she writes: "I am glad to say that I am still perfectly free from Piles, and have not had the slightest trouble since I first used your remedy. I am well known in Cleveland as the delicate and nervous system of women, and many of those afflicted, have resigned themselves to the situation with never a thought that there is any help in sight for them."

Testimony like this should convince the most skeptical that Pyramid Pile Cure not only cures, but cures to stay cured. It is in the form of a suppository; can be applied in the privacy of the home, directly to the parts affected, and does its work quickly and painlessly.

Shakespeare's delightful comedy, "Twelfth Night," will be presented at the Grand by Miss Marie Wainwright and her company on Wednesday, Nov. 2nd. Many of the great actresses have essayed the heroine in this play, but few have given her the poetic ideal, the love-breathing gentleness with which Miss Wainwright invests her, and fewer still have infused the life-like spirit which marks Miss Wainwright's impersonation. Like her Viola assumes male attire, but unlike Rosalind, she is wooed by a woman while disguised as a boy; Viola is in love with the duke, who in turn is in love with Olivia, who, as fate will have it, is in love with Viola, disguised as the youth Cesario. The manner in which Miss Wainwright interprets Shakespeare's method of untwining this triple love-snarl has made her the world's recognized exponent of this character. The past supporting Miss Wainwright in this revival is composed of ladies and gentlemen who, like herself, are identified with this wonderful comedy. For "Twelfth Night" is by no means a one part play. Malvolio, Sir Toby Belch, Orsino, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, Olivia and Maria are all star parts.

"Way Down East" is to be the attraction at the Grand on Monday, Nov. 7th, and that means a night of enjoyment for the theatre-goers, for the play is one of the wholesome, homely kind which appeals to the heart. It is just a play with a story which is not new, but which is truly told in a most charming manner.

Briefly the tale may be told—A girl who has been deceived by the villain though she has not caring over, goes away to a New England village to begin anew a life that has been all shattered. She becomes a sort of a companion and assistant in the household of a farmer whose son is engaged to a niece of his. The son falls in love with the newcomer, and his betrothed not caring over, much for each other anyway. Just as the love-making of the son and the companion has reached a climax, the village busy-body learns something of the girl's story, and tells the farmer. He investigates just far enough to learn that there is some truth in the story and then orders the girl to leave the house. It is night, and here is where is shown one of the most realistic bits of stagecraft ever given on any stage. A terrific blizzard is raging and the storm is seen as the girl opens the door to leave. As she goes she denounces her betrayer who by a strange coincidence is visiting the farmer. The son defies his parents and goes after the girl. He finds her in a snow-drift and takes her to a deserted sugar camp for shelter. Of course, the farmer relents and goes out to look for his son and the girl, and everything ends happily.

The Mummy and the Humming Bird, the sparkling and amusing comedy that scored such a remarkable success in London and New York, as well as in nearly every part of the civilized world, comes to this city in the near future, and Manager Jules Murry, not content with the knowledge that he has one of the greatest plays ever written, has formed a company that is so perfect that the auditor in witnessing their interpretation of this charming comedy is ready to believe that it is not acting, but that the beautiful story is occurring before his very eyes.

THE ANCIENT DRAGON.

Its Nearest Representative Now Is the East Indian Tree Lizard.

The pterodactyl, whose fossil remains have been found in the chalk at Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, with a very varied spread of wings, which in the largest specimens must have reached twenty-five feet, is almost identical with the dragon of fable.

A bat-like creature, with an elevated body and long neck ending in an absurdly small head with a portentous beak, it could run very swiftly, was a fish eater, and could swim, or it flew by means of huge membranous wings, which connected its long fore quarters with its hind legs.

The nearest representative now of the ancient dragon is the tree lizard of the East Indies, which resembles its fossil ancestors in form, but is infinitely smaller in size. The pterodactyl itself, however, evidently existed down to a comparatively recent geological period, and it is not at all improbable that the traditional dragon is described from the last living specimens, as met with by primitive man.—London Telegraph.

A Courageous Soldier.

Admiral Wilson of the British navy won his Victoria cross at the battle of El Teb in 1884. There was a gap in the square, and five or six of the enemy made a vicious rush forward, attempting to get inside. Captain Wilson, who was present with the naval brigade, advanced to meet them alone, but his sword broke in the endeavor to cut one of the intruders down. Hereupon the officer, instead of beating a hasty retreat, stood his ground and began bowling over the enemy with his fists. Either from the nature of the ground or, as the record puts it, "the surprising nature of his attack," Captain Wilson escaped with a few wounds and was rescued by the square closing up round him. Sir Redvers Buller described the act as the most courageous he ever witnessed.

The Human Neptune.

It is doubtful if there ever was a sturdier human Neptune than Captain Webb, whose memorable exploit in crossing the English channel will always be remembered. It was more ill luck—a fatal chance—which tossed him against a rock in the Whirlpool rapids of the Niagara river and ended his life. Lord Byron was a marvel in the water. He equaled the feat of Leander in propelling himself across the Hellespont without aid or relief from any quarter, and before him beamed no beckoning signals, glances and smiles from an incomparably beautiful Hero. But even Byron never swam across the English channel. As the champion of the silver streak of sea Webb was the wonder of the ages.
