Rise up ye Women that are at Ease

A MOTHER IN JAIL.
"Did you put my mother in jail?" asked a little tot of a girl while she pushed her sun-bonnet back and looked from one officer to another, as she stood in the police station. She was so young that she could hardly speak plainly, and so small that a policeman had to help her up the steps of the station-house.
The officers stared at the little visit. They had arrested a plump-haired woman who spoke four languages in her rage, and fought the officers like a fury. They did not dream that this was her child.
The little thing seemed so innocent and pure that they did not want her to see her mother caged like a wild beast behind iron bars, but the mother heard her voice and called her, and so they swung open the corridor door and let the little creature in. She went to the cell, looked in and cried, "Why mother, are you in jail?"
The mother shrank back aghast. The child dropped on her knees on the stone floor, clung to the iron bars of the door, and prayed, "Now I lay me down to sleep, and I hope my mother will be let out of jail!"
The strong men had a strange moisture about their eyes as they gently led the little thing away. When the case came into court, His Honor whispered to the woman to go home, and for her child's sake to behave as a mother should. Perhaps she will do so—unless she meets with some one licensed to deal out for the "public good," that which makes fathers act like brutes, and mothers forgive the sucking child. Perhaps she will prove a true mother, unless some honorable and respectable citizen gets her away on a dram on which he makes a profit of a few cents. Strange things are done in this world, but few are more strange than the wonders wrought by the devil's draught, which in an hour turns love to hate, calmness to frenzy, quiet to confusion, and a mother to a fiend.—Selected.

LIBERTY.

The policeman interfered with the personal liberties of a man dog on the streets the other day, and shot his life out, just because it went mad. The dog couldn't help going mad, any more than the liquor seller can help the people from becoming drunkards, and wrecks and vagabonds, when they drink the liquor he is authorized to sell. Why, then, kill the dog? Because his madman endangers human life. But all the lives lost by mad dog bites since Cain slew Abel have never done the human race as much harm as one saloon can do in a single generation. Yes, kill the mad dog, but kill the saloon too. Of all the mad things that ever poisoned human life and happiness, it is by far the most deadly.—The Week Advance.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

At a recent annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the United States, held at Boston, a rousing speech was delivered by Rev. Father James R. Cleary, of Minneapolis, president of the organization. Among other forcible statements in his address, were the following:
"I wish to emphasize that it is upon harmonious organization that we depend very largely for ability to cope with the powerful liquor traffic of the country.
"There are two factors that we have to deal with principally, the appetite of the drinker, which often comes to be a disease, and the appetite of the liquor seller. The appetites and passions of men cannot be controlled by laws; they require higher and holier influences than any legislative body can enact; they must receive the influence of conscience, religious teachings and supernatural motives. The aversion of the dealer, however, seldom yields to appeals of religion; it requires the strong arm of the law to make it yield.
"The kingdom of heaven even has no place for the drunkard, says sacred, inspired Scripture, and certainly the church of Christ on earth has no more place for him. Our Union seeks no opposition to any good movement or rightful occupation, but it seeks the good, the uplifting of mankind."
PRACTICAL PROHIBITION.

THE BENEFITS THAT HAVE COME TO SCOTLAND BY THE LAW PROHIBITING THE SALE OF LIQUOR ON SUNDAY

in a forcible speech recently made in Glasgow, by Ex-Battle Lewis, in which he said:
"The consumption of spirits in Scotland seven years before the operation of the Forbes-McKenzie Act stood at 47,338, 802 gallons, while seven years after the passing of the Act it had fallen to 37,745, 976 gallons. We took away one-seventh of the publican's working time, and it is a remarkable coincidence that it reduced his trade by more than one-seventh.
Look now at its effects on drunkenness and crime. In Glasgow in three years under the old law 24,979 were convicted. In three years under the new law 19,370 were convicted. Under the old law 4,082

Often in the morning there comes a feeling of weariness, indescribable; not exactly ill, nor fit to work, but too near well to remain idle.
A Ripans Tabule taken at night, before retiring, or just after dinner, has been known to drive away that weariness for months.
