She shrunk back, pale and trem ling, at these words,

"I can slay nothing," she said. But he did not seem to hear her. He was looking at her, trying to weigh the effect of her graceful young loveiness on the hearts of men.

"Leah," he said slowly, "you will do better than I have done. You will make fortune."

A flame, almost of fire, spread over her beautiful face.

"Make a what, father-a fortune? I thought you gave up everything to the people you taught-not took from

They must be taught that the goods of this fair world woods, broad, deep streams, mines of untold wealth underground, while another dies from want of bread. They must be taught, Leah, that no man has a right to make slaves—to torture, to kill, to bind the necks of thousands of his fellow men under an intolerable

"But," she said, slowly, "men must be ruled, must be governed. It seems to me a little matter whether they are ruled by kings or by such as you. I know little, but I cannot help thinking that if all these barriers and inequalities were swept away by a mighty wave of revolution, the self-same barries would naturally arise again. All men cannot be equal-industry must outstrip idleness, genius must succeed "Think! I am sure of it! Did not better than folly, wisdom reign over Joan of Arc, a girl feeble and frail as ignorance.
